Eternal Debt Talk.
And Prohibition Talk,
Wall Street Symptoms.
The Twins Complain.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Nov. 29.

LONDON REPORTS, through Universal Service, that Britain is sending a second note explaining "inability" to pay the debt installment of $95,500,000 in December.

There can be no question of "inability," since the British have now, in the Bank of England's vaults, enough GOLD to pay that debt seven times over.

ALL AMERICANS, and many Englishmen will agree with a statement, cabled to London at the request of Reynolds' Illustrated News, and republished in London Daily Telegraph, in which W. R. Hearst says:

"It is inconceivable that a great commercial nation, a great business nation, like England, would evade the payment of an honest debt."

"The statement that England needs the money is not relevant," says Mr. Hearst. "America also needs the money. * * * America has more war debt, more deficit, more unemployed—in fact, more depression."

BRITAIN, ACCORDING to Montagu Norman, of the Bank of England, wishes to avoid the unpleasant word "default," but the only way to evade that is to PAY. The pound dropped to $3.17 yesterday, lowest level ever reached, which means worry.

SPEAKER GARNER has prepared a prohibition resolution demanding, subject to legal ratification, that "THE EIGHTEENTH ARTICLE OF AMENDMENT IS HEREBY REPEALED."

That would allow each of the 48 states to deal with drink in its own way, as in old days, before bootlegging and crime became the greatest industry of the United States.

Whether that amendment to the Constitution, eliminating the Eighteenth Amendment, would be ratified by 36 of the states is the question, and the answer, now, is NO. If Congress wants to do anything about prohibition, it must change the Volstead Law.

THE MINISTERS' Association of Los Angeles yesterday adopted a resolution calling on Congress not to repeal prohibition, but to enforce prohibition more vigorously, alleging that CRIME WILL INCREASE WITH THE RETURN OF BEER AND WINE.

An association of ministers can hardly be mistaken, but it is not easy to imagine how the crime could increase much.

DOES ANY clergyman believe that there is less crime now than before prohibition started?

Billy Sunday, always sincere and forceful, made an impassioned plea for more and better prohibition, revealing what he called the source of our ills.

"Infidel evolutionists, university teachings, modernism and liberalism" are responsible for our troubles.

Poor Darwinian monkey, there is a heavy load on that primate's back.

GENEVA REPORTS that Japan will demand revision of the 5-5-3 ratio of the London naval treaty, making Japan inferior to Britain and this country, on the sea, as 3 is to 5.

Japan will demand abolition of aircraft carriers and a larger quota of submarines for Japan.

Why not let Japan and other powers build whatever they WANT, while this country builds whatever it NEEDS without asking anybody's advice or consent.

What we NEED is such weapons as would enable us to destroy the shipping and principal cities of any nation foolish enough to attack us, and that is what we ought to HAVE.

DID YOU ever hear an aged, rheumatic person describe his symptoms in painful detail? Wall Street was such a person yesterday. There was the lowest price on record for the pound, the lowest for silver, all-time lows in some cotton options, wheat trembling on the brink, bonds soft.

In that land of "water, water everywhere," there is gloom now. Before long faces will be smiling, and everybody will pretend that "he bought them when they were low." He did not, but he will buy them, when they are high.

HINDENBURG, justly called "Germany's Rock of Gibraltar," has selected, but not yet named the cabinet that will carry Germany through the winter.

"Drastic economies and increased government construction projects to alleviate unemployment" are parts of the German program that this country should copy.

W. R. Hearst's grandchildren, boy and girl twins five years old, who flew here from Los Angeles a week ago, flew home yesterday, with their mother, Mrs. George Hearst, and her mother, Mrs. Wilbur.

As they climbed into the airplane, the twins protested loudly. The boy complained:

"I'm sick and tired of this old airplane. We want to go home on the railroad and see the engine."

Thus human beings become used to what is new. When they are grown, those twins will say:

"I remember when we used to travel in railroad cars, and even make long trips in little automobiles."

COUNCIL DIRECTS KLINE BUDGET CUT

SCHOLARSHIP SALES LINK VARE AIDE

Chancellor Bowman to Sift List of 'Free' Pitt Students

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—A former employe of William S. Vare, Republican leader, used Vare's stationery and his office as a clearing house in the sale of free scholarships to state-aided schools, State Senator Samuel W. Salus charged today.

The employe was dismissed when Vare learned of his activities, later obtained employment in the Auditor General's office and was discharged from that job when his record in the scholarship operations was disclosed, Salus asserted.

Exchange of scholarships to four institutions, Penn, Pitt, State College and Temple, by state senators, each entitled to three certificates from each of the four schools, resulted in the coveted credentials falling into hands of racketeers who sold them to the highest bidder, it is charged. None of the senators is personally believed to be involved.

SCAN PITT RECORDS

Records of scholarships granted by the University of Pittsburgh were to be scanned upon return of Chancellor John G. Bowman from Harrisburg late today, to determine whether any of the free tuition certificates designed for needy students had been sold.

Chancellor Bowman, at Harrisburg, declared he believed Pitt was not involved in the reported sale of scholarships granted to State Senators by state-aided schools.

The university head said he would not permit publication of the list of students receiving scholarships through state senators unless the executive committee of Pitt authorized it. He said:

"I do not believe the University of Pittsburgh is in any way connected with these rumors. I do not have any knowledge of

BOY'S STORY OF TORTURE PROBED

Kidnaped, Bonds Cut In Frick Park, He Charges

Police were investigating the seemingly fantastic story of a 12-year-old boy who said he was kidnaped and slashed with a razor blade by three shabbily-dressed youths as he was on his way to school today.

School officials said the boy, Kenneth Cook, 12, of 1203 Richmond street, Regent Square, bears a reputation for truthfulness and is president of the Character Club in the seventh grade at the Regent Square School.

Cook said the men, riding in a blue sedan, stopped at the curb at Milton and Sanders streets. Two of them leaped out, seized him and drove away, and cruised through the Squirrel Hill district for 15 or 20 minutes, he said.

They then went to Frick Woods, took him from the car, and while one of them held him another slashed his left hand across the palm and back and on the fingers, barely drawing blood.

The boy said a man passed through the woods a considerable distance away and, upon seeing him, the captors released their prisoner and told him to leave. Cook said the automobile had no license plates.

Records of Accounts Taken to Harrisburg By Witness

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 29.—Public Service Commissioner S. Ray Shelby's efforts to keep his private bank records from the Senate Committee which is investigating the Public Service Commission and public utilities today appeared doomed.

Shelby last week obtained an injunction which forbids the Second National Bank of Uniontown, from giving Attorney O. K. Eaton, counsel for the committee, such records, but apparently this injunction did not apply to other banks.

Today, armed with Shelby's bank record in the Fayette Title and Trust Company, John M. Core, the former president of that bank, left for Harrisburg in answer to a subpena. It is understood he carried also Shelby's record in the National Bank of Fayette County. Shelby was a director in both these banks.

Core was accompanied by Robert L. Arnett, cashier of the Second National Bank, who also was subpenaed. But Arnett lacked the Shelby records, having been enjoined by the courts.

Core is expected to produce the records when the Senate committee sits tomorrow in Harrisburg.

LIEUT. MARGARET H. ORR

'ARMY' WORKER DIES FOR NEEDY

Needy families of Canonsburg missed a familiar figure today—a young women wearing a Salvation Army uniform who had gone in and out among their homes, learning their needs and seeing that food was provided.

Margaret H. Orr, 24, a lieutenant in the Canonsburg Corps, lay dead in the home of her father, John H. Orr, 422 James street, Turtle Creek.

Burdened by the incessant petitions of relief from the destitute, she had worn herself out, her father said, in performing her tasks, with the result that she fell a prey to illness culminating in appendicitis, which caused her death.

Lieut. Orr was born and reared in Turtle Creek, where she attended public school. Three years ago she joined the Salvation Army. Her superiors said she was one of the hardest working and most efficient members of their staff. Funeral services will be held tomorrow by Army officials.

CLARK, LANG ORDERED TO SLASH

Herron in Vigorous Attack on Mayor's 1933 Estimates

Council President John S. Herron accepted the challenge of Mayor Charles H. Kline today when the Mayor passed over to Council the 1933 budget calling for total appropriations of $25,206,228 and indicating an increase of 7 mills tax on land.

Herron, opening the session, severely criticized the budget and said:

"This budget, as it is, might have been sent to us two months ago for all the good it is to us now. We will need to add to it a $2,000,000 deficit in order to balance the budget. We have a job here and it is not going to be a very pleasant one."

'BUDGET MUST BE CUT'

There were only a few present when the session began. Council agreed to call in all the department heads to defend the appropriations set up for their divisions. Herron said every department must be cut and cut drastically, but that it must be done intelligently.

Edward G. Lang, director of public works, was the first department head summoned.

Letters were read at the opening of the meeting from taxpayers and civic organizations protesting an increase in taxes. Among them were the Frankstown-Brushton Community organization, Property Owners of the Thirteenth Ward, Peoples Home Building and Loan Association, Albert J. Schmidt and John Dimling.

After a discussion it was agreed to hear every person asking to be heard. The budget must be completed by December 15, Herron said, and night sessions would be held if necessary.

SEES ECONOMY

Lang declared he believed substantial economies could be effected in his department, provided Council would help him. He said:

"I believe material decreases can be made, but if I cut I wan

PINCHOT MEETS BLUE LAW FOES

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—A proponent and opponent of retention of the state's Sunday blue laws inadvertently have obtained an appointment late today to confer with Gov. Pinchot.

They are Dr. W. B. Forney, Philadelphia, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, and Philadelphia Councilman William W. Roper.

Although the nature of the two conferences was not disclosed, it is likely that the blue laws will be discussed when Roper and Forney meet.

In the 1931 session of the Legislature Forney was active in opposing repeal of the blue laws. A repealer was passed by the House and killed in committee in the Senate. Roper was one of the chief proponents of the repeal measure.

HUNGER MARCH UNDER D. C. BAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—The Commissioners of the District of Columbia told the organizers of the so-called "hunger march" on the capital next week they could not provide the visitors free food and lodging and a place of assembly immune from police molestation.

They said the local government lacked sufficient funds to comply with the requests.

Herbert Benjamin, of the National Unemployed Councils of America, who, with Williams Reynolds, chairman of the organization, conferred with the commissioners, said:

"We will not voluntarily give up our right to present demands to Congress, even though we recognize that the superior armed forces at the disposal of the district and federal governments may serve violently to deprive us of that right."

The shortage, company officials said, must have been small, for MacCullam had access to only small sums. It was believed the figure was in the neighborhood of $1,450.

French Cabinet Imperiled on War Debt Issue

International News Service.

The war debt issue precipitated a cabinet crisis in France today as Premier Herriot, ignoring the Chamber of Deputies' overwhelming sentiment against payment of the instalment due the United States on December 15, decided to ask a vote of confidence on the question of carrying on his present negotiations.

The English pound, under heavy selling, slumped again to a new all-time low at $3.14½.

CO-ED DIVORCE CASE WITNESS

Miss Helen Cardinale, of 6468 Jackson street, a brunette art student at Carnegie Tech, testified yesterday in the divorce suit of Dr. Daniel A. Ressa that Mrs. Ressa offered her $500 and a trip to Rome, which, Miss Cardinale assumed, was to testify for her or stay out of the case.

Miss Cardinale said the offer was made over the telephone. She testified Mrs. Ressa suggested a trip to Cleveland for her and her mother. Mrs. Ressa denied Miss Cardinale's story, saying she did not have $500.

Miss Cardinale testified she was not in Schenley Park June 1, when, it had been testified, Dr. Ressa met a woman, who entered his automobile. The witness said she was out of the city at the time.

Ex-Sweethearts Called In Riding Master Trial

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Service.

NEW CITY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—A parade of former loves of both Sidney Herbert Homewood and Miss Charlotte Gibson was promised today, with the opening of Homewood's trial for the betrayal of the young society woman.

Both District Attorney Henry V. Stebbins and Caesar Barra, of Homewood's counsel, said they would delve into the past for witnesses at the trial, one of the most startling Rockland County has known.

The District Attorney will summon two girls, at least, who were once engaged to Homewood, the man Miss Gibson says is the father of her unborn child. The slight blond riding master, although only 25, had been engaged three times before he met Miss Gibson, according to Stebbins.

Miss Gibson, whose child is expected to be born next month, does not want to marry Homewood now, Stebbins declared.

Homewood once offered to marry her, his counsel said, but Robert Gibson, the girl's father, made conditions for the marriage which he found unacceptable, according to the defense.

Two men who will say they had rendezvous with Miss Gibson on Cape Cod are to testify for the defense, it was learned.

Homewood denies the assertion that 23-year-old Charlotte was "entirely innocent" before she became his riding pupil.

Incidentally, the riding stables which were Homewood's livelihood before this scandal broke, are understood to be closed now.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Ready to 'Tell All'

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—The inside story of the famous Harry K. Thaw case is going to be told at last.

None other than Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, the former wife of the man whose shooting of Stanford White and subsequent trial held the nation spellbound, is going to do the telling. She revealed her plans today for her autobiography. She said:

"I'm going to tell the truth, the absolute truth, and, believe me, it's going to blow up a certain person. It will be the great American tragedy — the Thaw case. I'm going to write the story of my whole life, and believe me, I've lived about 20 lives in this existence."

She promised to lay bare not only the Thaw case, but also to contrast "love as it is now" with love as she knew it 20 years ago.

The only thing important to her now she said, was health, and, of course, her 22-year-old aviator son, Russell K. Thaw.

She is now in a hospital, recovering from a long illness.

G. O. P ANTI-DRYS TO CAUCUS ON GARNER REPEAL MOVE

BECK SUPPORTS SPEAKER ON QUICK VOTE

Passage Depends Upon Lame Duck Members; Dry Fighting

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Republican wets in the House will be summoned into special session to consider the proposal of Speaker John N. Garner for passage of a prohibition repeal resolution on the opening day of Congress.

Representative James M. Beck (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican "wet bloc," announced today he would support the outright repeal resolution framed by Garner after conferences with Democratic leaders. The "wet bloc" session may be held this week, Beck said.

PLEA FOR REPEAL

Strong Republican wets will make an appeal to the 95 "wet bloc" members to go down the line for submission of prohibition repeal to the states despite the fact that the Garner resolution differs from the Republican platform.

As plans went forward for a quick showdown on repeal, both wet and dry organizations began exerting pressure on returning members.

Passage of the resolution, which must command two-thirds of the House, was in doubt, with predictions being made both ways by leaders in the fight.

A canvass of the declarations of the "lame duck" members indicated passage is unlikely unless the Republican members now supporting the Hoover plan throw their full strength behind the movement.

SENATE DOUBTFUL

Senate drys, watching the House action, declared outright repeal could not pass. This view is shared by Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho.

While the beer question was overshadowed temporarily by the fight for repeal, plans were being made for the House Ways and Means Committee beer hearings on December 7.

Collier said a majority of the brewers apparently had settled on 3 per cent beer as opposed to 2.75 per cent.

Senator Johnson Joins Demand for Beer

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(Universal)—Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, Progressive Republican leader, revealed here he had joined the anti-prohibitionists.

En route to Washington for the short session of Congress, he said he is convinced that the Volstead act will be modified without delay and the necessary resolution for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment adopted and forwarded to the states for ratification.

As firmly opposed as ever to cancellation of the European war debts, the Senator said he was opposed also to "revision, reduction and reconsideration."

NORRIS SHUNS CABINET JOB

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Senator George W. Norris, insurgent leader, who twice bolted President Hoover, announced today he favored rigid governmental economy, opposed war debt reductions, favored legalization of beer and opposed resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Norris also declared he would not aid the Democrats in organizing the Senate at the short session of Congress. He said the Democrats would "make a mistake" if they began a scramble for jobs as soon as Congress reconvenes.

He also announced he would not accept a cabinet post from Mr. Roosevelt nor the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee from the Democrats when they take control.

Hunt Signs Order For Arizona Repeal

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—From his sick bed in a hospital here, Gov. George W. P. Hunt yesterday signed an order declaring Arizona's prohibition law null and void.

Arizona's prohibition law was adopted six years before national prohibition. The only liquor law now effective in the state is the federal act. The vote on repeal of the state law was 63,850 to 36,218, the canvassing board announced just before Gov. Hunt made the repeal effective.

ROOSEVELT'S PLANS BACKED

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 29.—With the approval of President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democrats will battle at the "lame duck" session of Congress for modification of the Volstead law, enactment of farm relief measures and drastic reductions in federal government expenditures.

If these three major proposals are enacted at the short session, Gov. Roosevelt, it was revealed today, is convinced he will escape the necessity of calling a special session immediately after his inauguration next March.

Following a two-hour conference with Mr. Roosevelt, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic Senate chief, said the Senate would withhold confirmation of pending or new executive appointments with possibly a few exceptions. He declared:

"Indications are that executive nominations coming into the Senate during the short session will be carried over until after the new administration is inaugurated. It may be necessary to make exceptions, but no effort is being made now to decide what exceptions, if any, should be made."

GARNER REPEAL DRIVE LAUDED

Raymond Pitcairn, Philadelphia anti-dry, who has been in Pittsburgh attending meetings of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company officials, today hailed Vice President-elect Garner with these words:

"Vice President-elect Garner, in his program to make the great issue of repeal the prime move in the opening of the new Congress, has demonstrated a superb leadership, which will hearten the nation and inspire confidence in the future."

McNary Sees Quick Action on Repeal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Senator McNary (Rep.), of Oregon, today expressed to President Hoover an opinion that Congress could "dispose" of a prohibition repeal amendment before the Christmas holidays.

On leaving the White House, he declined to amplify what he meant by "dispose," whether rejecting or enacting such a proposal.

Einstein (Izzy) Lectures On Beer's Relativity

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Izzy Einstein, who won renown as "prohibition agent No. 1," thinks the return of 4 per cent beer would make most of America forget all about hard liquor. He says:

"From my experience, 2.75 beer doesn't taste like much, and I can't guarantee it would end bootlegging or rum running.

"Of course there are a lot of people who think they're real drinkers—real experts at telling what's what—who don't know the difference between ginger pop and liquid dynamite.

"Anyone who thinks raising the alcoholic content to 2.75 or even 4 per cent will bring back wine is crazy. Two-seventy-five wine tastes like William Jennings Bryan grapejuice. Real wine has to have 15 to 20 per cent alcohol."

debt installment due the United States on December 15.

Herriot, it was announced by Paul Marchandeau, under-secretary of state, will go before the Chamber on Thursday and ask for a vote of confidence, demanding a free hand to carry out the present war debt negotiations.

Herriot will ask the chamber to give him the confidence vote in place of voting on the proposal offered by Louis Marin, right Nationalist leader, which if passed would be tantamount to a warning that the chamber would refuse to ratify the payment. Marchandau said:

"The premier would prefer to fall on a technicality rather than the definite question of to play or not to play.

"According to present plans, he will face the chamber on Thursday and say:

"'I am now engaged in negotiating the war debt problem, therefore the chamber should not take a responsibility which is mine at the moment when I have chosen a solution, accepting or rejecting it.'"

Opinion expressed in the corridors of the Chamber was that Herriot's decision to ask a confidence vote under these conditions entails certain downfall.

M'DONALD, KING CONFER

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Bearing a draft of the British government's new note asking suspension of the December 15 war debt payment, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald called at Buckingham Palace this evening and went into conference with King George.

Before leaving 10 Downing street for the palace, Premier MacDonald called a special session of his cabinet for 9 p. m., in the cabinet room of the House of Commons.

At this meeting, the draft of the note is expected to be approved and probably will be dispatched to Washington without further delay.

The Premier's visit to the Palace was in line with King George's request that he be kept in close touch with all developments.

It was anticipated he might suggest some revisions in the draft of the note, which Premier MacDonald will promptly transmit to the cabinet at tonight's session.

While MacDonald was conferring with King George his government sustained a defeat in the House of Commons on a 'technical question. There was no question of resignation, as the vote was not regarded as vital.

The adverse vote came on a question of procedure in connection with the transport bill, the government being defeated 223 to 122. The vote was followed by ironical cries of "resign" from the opposition benches.

POLITICIANS BLAMED

He voiced the belief that senators in trading their scholarships may have unwittingly permitted some of them to fall into the hands of minor politicians who had sold them.

A Pitt scholarship for the four-year course is valued at about $1,200.

State Senator William D. Mansfield, whose inquiry regarding the disposition of scholarship he had traded to Senator Max Aaron, of Philadelphia, started the probe in that city, continued ready today to initiate a legislative investigation, if the charges are not cleared up.

PINCHOT TELLS JOB PLIGHT

HARRISBURG, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today described unemployment relief as a "desperate attempt to lock the stable door after the horse is gone."

Addressing the organization meeting of his recently appointed committee to draft legislation to insure workers against unavoidable unemployment, he said:

"Relief has been a tremendous help, but it can never be more than a belated and partial cure for our industrial ills.

"We must in the future take preventive steps beforehand to make certain that unemployment shall not again take such a distressing toll of our workers' health and of their morale."

A. F. L. MEETING SPURS JOB AID PROGRAM

Demand of Green for 5-Day Week Cheered; Strikes Hinted

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 29. (AP.) — Encouraged by the roar of approval with which their convention accepted one phase of their program for unemployment relief, leaders of the American Federation of Labor looked forward today to speedy action on others.

The body yesterday committed itself to a nationwide application of the five-day week and six-hour day without reduction of wages.

Today the convention awaited the resolution committee's report on compulsory unemployment insurance, recommended by the federation's executive council—along with shorter work schedules—as "of prime importance if unemployment relief is to be obtained."

STUDY LEWIS PLAN

Another committee studied a move urged by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who yesterday presented a resolution calling for an amendment to the federation's constitution to enlarge the executive council membership by increasing vice presidents from eight to 25. Lewis declined to discuss his proposal, except to say "it is broad matter of constructive change."

It was President William Green who in a speech that lifted delegates to their feet, led the fight for convention advocacy of the five-day week and six-hour day. He delared:

"We must let the world know we demand action in response to our appeals to reason, or we'll secure it through force of some kind."

Later he explained he meant "economic force," with possible recourse to strikes, picketing and boycotting.

Kline Budget Slashes Ordered by Council

Garland pointed out that Council cannot cut the Mayor's salary.

Lang revealed his budget was prepared with the hope conditions would improve and was an effort to give as much work as possible to employes.

Herron warned the city must keep within its income, and stated it might be necessary to furlough some employes. Councilman P. J. McArdle said:

"The director should have approached this problem with the understanding there is absolutely nothing sacred in the formation of a department. As I look at this budget, it seems to me an effort has been made to preserve the 'organization.' I think we should recognize that these kind of times do not warrant such an organization."

PRAISES CITIZENS

Herron praised the special citizens' committee for its helpful attitude.

Councilman Robert Garland pointed out the city is paying laborers 55 cents an hour while industry is paying 25 cents and getting more efficient service. He said clerks drawing $2,000 from the city couldn't get as much outside of city employment. He said:

"There are sinecures in the city. I advise that the big fellow be cut. Cut everyone, including Council."

When Safety Director James M. Clark appeared Herron said:

"You stand out as the director asking $400,000 more than last year. Each one of us is determined that you are not going to get it. We want you to look forward to elimination of engine houses and police stations where possible."

Herron suggested that Clark hold conferences with his subordinates looking to economies and consolidation of overlapping bureaus.

When the police pension fund was mentioned Clark said he thought the increase in the pension fund could be changed radically. He said he would tell why later.

DUNLAP GETS ORDER

W. L. Dunlap, director of the Supplies Department, was told to cut his budget, and St. Clair Cooper, chief clerk in the Department of Health, appearing in the absence of Director C. B. Maits, was told that with less disease and less litter on streets it should be possible to consolidate a number of bureau activities.

McArdle pointed out it is impossible to secure new sources of revenue to relieve the taxpayer next year and Herron said:

"Not only that, but I am afraid we will not be allowed to figure on any new sources of revenue."

That ended the first budget session.

The budget for 1933, as sent from the Mayor's office, totals $25,206,228, a decrease from last year's appropriation of $98,880.

The Mayor completely disregard and failed to provide for the present city deficit, which, according to City Controller James P. Kerr, will exceed $2,000,000 by the end of the year.

Mayor Kline did take note, however, of the declining rate of tax collections, figuring collections in 1933 at about 73.3 per cent of the tax levy, a decrease in revenue that would necessitate an increase in the tax millage of four mills on land and two mills on buildings. About $840,000 more for salaries was included in the 1933 budget than was appropriated in 1932.

Aside from some substantial cuts in the Department of Public Works many of the city departments show increased allotments. With few exceptions, the payroll has been unmolested in the Mayor's budget. The salary schedules have been placed on a 12-month basis instead of an 11-month basis as last year, which gives the payroll an even bulkier appearance than usual.

Much assistance is expected by members of Council from the special citizens' committee, first appointed to find sources of revenue, but which recently has turned out to be an economy committee. The committee was in conference until late last night at City Hall.

Mayor Kline stated in a letter to Council that the salary schedules were prepared on a full-time basis because he believes that any action toward reducing the number of employes or the rates of compensation should be the result of careful study and joint action by the legislative and executive branches of the city.

DEFICIT INCREASES

The tax rate was set by Council last year at 23 mills on land and 11.5 mills on buildings, a reduction of 2.5 mills on land from 1931. Declining tax collections, however, have been piling up a deficit amounting to more than the tax reduction.

Department heads have been slow in dismissing employes, even where appropriations for salaries have been cut by Council.

In the new budget the only considerable decrease in the payroll is the dropping of 27 men at the Brilliant Pumping Station, where modern machinery makes a large force unnecessary.

The Department of Public Safety shows an increase in all its bureaus. The police budget is up $150,632 and the fire department budget up $198,087. The bureaus of building inspection and electricity show increases.

Nearly all the numerous inspection services of the city show increases. The bureau of sanitation shows a reduction of $303,896, almost entirely in a reduced estimate for garbage and rubbish collection.

VOTE OFFICIAL TESTIFIES ON TAMPERING

Stowe Township Man Insists Ballots Were Changed

Returning board judges today heard George Choka, Jr., of 77 Fleming avenue, Stowe Township, judge of election and a Republican, tell how ballots in the box of the Fourth Ward, Stowe Township had been changed to give Republican Twelfth Legislative candidates a majority in the district.

Choka told Judges W. H. McNaugher and John P. Egan that when the board finished the count, which included 214 straight Democratic votes and 28 straight Republican ballots, he placed all ballots in the bottom of the box, with the return sheet and envelopes and other papers on top. It was sealed and tied with ribbon. When it was opened in the returning board, the ballots were on top of the envelopes. According to Choka:

"It looked as though a couple of ground hogs had gotten in and smeared it up."

LOCK "SEALED"

He also said the lock on the box was clogged with sealing wax, when it arrived at the recount board, but the wax was not placed there by the board.

Choka said Squire Savatt receipted for the box at 11:30 p. m. election night. The board completed its work at 1:30 a. m. the following morning and turned the box over to the Stowe Township police sergeant, under instruction from Squire Savatt.

The board's count gave Republican legislative candidates approximately one-third of the vote but more than 100 straight Democratic ballots were marked later it is alleged, to show majorities for the Republicans.

WOMAN TESTIFIES

The judges heard similar testimony from Mrs. Anna Simmons, judge of election in the Third Ward, Stowe Township, and then ruled that the Third and Fourth ward election board's figures be tabulated by the returning board in conformity to a previous order made in the Rankin and Carnegie contests. In the Rankin and Carnegie cases the court ruled that the district board's figures be computed instead of the recount board, because they found evidence of fraud.

With the recount board slated to tabulate the ballots from the remaining 11 out of 25 boxes originally impounded, David Drexler, representing the District Attorney's Office in charge of election investigations, said he would have nothing to say until the recount board had completed its findings.

Judge James H. Gray has made an order to impound the ballot box of the Eighth District of the Ninth Ward for a recount of the ballots. Attorney James L. O'Toole, Jr., presented the petition alleging belief that fraud had been committed.

VOTE GUARDING PLEAS AIRED

Director William T. Rees, head of the Bureau of Elections, today was expected to place before the County Commissioners complaints as to how certain alderman or justices of the peace guarded ballot boxes left in their custody. It will be then up to the Commissioners as to whether the information will be turned over the District Attorney Andrew T. Park for prosecution.

Election laws call for a fine of $100 to $1,000 for the alderman or justice of the peace who fails to guard properly a box left in his care.

Patman to Renew Fight For Mellon Quiz, Bonus

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—A drive for investigation of the administration of the Treasury Department under former Secretary Andrew W. Mellon and passage of the $2,000,000,000 World War veterans' bonus bill will be started by Representative Patman (Dem.), of Texas, soon after Congress convenes.

Patman sponsored the soldiers' bonus cash payment bill which passed the House last session, but was defeated in the Senate. He dropped his impeachment against Mellon during the last session when Mellon was appointed ambassador to the Court of St. James. Patman said:

"I propose to have the inquiry before the statute of limitations prevents the prosecution of any treasury official. I am not done with Secretary Mellon.

"The soldiers' bonus bill will be urged, and it will get more support than ever before. I have spoken in nearly every state in the Union in the last few months, and people are rapidly coming to understand that it is the only way to get money out to the people.

"It is my hope that there will be no bonus march on Washington. I opposed the march last year. It does not do the boys any good."

COMMUNITY MEDICAL CENTERS URGED BY HEALTH EXPERTS

GROUP PAYMENT BY INSURANCE, TAX FAVORED

Extension of Service To Care for All of Public Proposed

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The community medical center emerged today as the "keystone" recommendation of the committee on the cost of medical care.

The committee delivered its report, the result of five years of research, before the national conference on the costs of medical care at the New York Academy of Medicine.

Five basic recommendations were made. They were, in brief:

That medical care be furnished, largely by organized groups of physicians, dentists, nurses, pharmacists and other associated personnel, centered around a hospital, and rendering home, office and hospital care.

That all basic public health services be extended until they are available to the entire population, according to its needs.

GROUP PAYMENT BASIS

That the cost of medical care be placed on a group payment basis through the use of insurance, taxation or both methods, without precluding the continuation of the individual fee basis for those who prefer it.

That a specific organization be formed in every community or state for the study, evaluation and co-ordination of medical service.

That the professional education of physicians, dentists, pharmacists and nurses be re-oriented to accord more closely with present needs, and that educational facilities be provided to train three new types of workers in the field of health, namely, nursing attendants, nurse-midwives and trained hospital and clinical administrators.

The committee was created in 1927 with Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former president of the American Medical Association, as chairman. It made 26 fact-finding studies and was supported financially by eight foundations and two other organizations. Supplementary studies were made for it by the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association and several other institutions with research facilities.

EXPERTS ON COMMITTEE

The committee consisted of 24 doctors of medicine, 11 persons engaged in other forms of medical

FORD BELIEVED ON WAY TO RECOVERY

Vitality Amazes His Physicians; Jokes With Wife

International News Service.

DETROIT, Nov. 29.—Henry Ford has passed the crisis in his illness, and is on the road to recovery, it was believed today.

Shortly after 10 a. m. his physicians issued a bulletin saying:

"Mr. Ford had a quiet, restful night. His temperature this morning was 98.6, his pulse 70, and his respiration 18."

CONDITION SATISFACTORY

The last official word received yesterday was a bulletin at 7 p. m. which read:

Meanwhile, through the strict veil of secrecy and censorship thrown around the Ford Hospital suite, where the motor magnate lies, came unofficial news of the most encouraging nature.

By devious methods reporters learned that Ford is a cheerful but unruly patient. His strength is returning so swiftly, it was said, that attendants restrain him with difficulty from sitting up in bed.

LAUGHS AND JOKES

I was reported that he continually laughs and jokes with Mrs. Ford, his son, Edsel, and hospital attaches, and avidly reads every available newspaper account of his case.

Barring possible complications, members of the Ford family are no longer worried about his illness.

It was said that his recuperative powers amaze his physicians. This unusual vitality in a man nearing the "three-score-and-ten" mark was attributed to Ford's life of strict industry and sobriety. The motor magnate has never used tobacco or alcohol, and Mrs. Ford for years has enforced strict regulation of his diet.

MURRAY PARDON BUOYS MILLER TO NEW HOPES

Escapes Alimony Sentence Through Military Threat

MARLAND, Okla., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—His cell unlocked by a threat of military force, Col. Zack Miller waved a plainsman's thanks today to "a Governor who's got courage" and took time out to "enjoy the open spaces" of his one-time empire of the range, the 101 Ranch.

Miller marched jubilantly from the Kay County jail at Newkirk yesterday at dusk, pardoned by Gov. W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray from a contempt of court conviction and imprisonment which followed his failure to pay temporary alimony to his estranged wife, Mrs. Margaret Blevins-Miller.

A crowd of nearly 100 friends met him as he started home to the ranch white house. Miller said:

"I must admit the jail was too confining. From now on I am going to enjoy the open spaces.

"Sunday was the longest day I ever spent. I read all the papers I could get hold of. I even read the want ads. I'm glad Oklahoma has a Governor who's got courage."

2 BLASTS ROCK HOMES, STORE; 24 PERILED

Families Hurled From Beds in Fair Oaks, Duquesne

Two mysterious explosions—one in Duquesne attributed to warfare among racketeers and another in Fair Oaks—early today endangered the lives of 24 persons, including 14 children, and partially wrecked two buildings and a grocery store.

No one was injured.

In Duquesne a bomb was hurled between the adjoining homes of John Pesta, at 320 South Fourth street, and Andy Danzak, inflicting serious damage to both houses and imperiling the lives of Pesta, his wife and five children, Pesta's son-in-law, Charles Chestlo, his wife and two infant children.

AIMED AT STORE

The bomb was believed to have been aimed at Danzak, who conducts a small grocery on the first floor of the partially wrecked building at 322 South Fourth street. Danzak, his wife and two grown children have living quarters on the second floor.

Windows were shattered in many nearby houses. Pieces of metal ripped through the frame house of J. P. Schaming directly across the street and lodged in inside doors.

This was the third time Danzak had been a target for a bomber. And there were reports that before each bombing he had received letters demanding money. The last letter demanded $1,500, it was said. The first attempt was in August, when the bomb ripped the rear porch. The second bomb, tossed in September, failed to explode.

FAIR OAKS BLAST

A charge of dynamite apparently placed against the front door of the home of Mike Peros, in Beech street, Fair Oaks, hurled Peros' wife, Alice, and their children, Catherine, 4, and Constantine, 2, and Mike's brother, Peter Peros; his wife, Calaroi, and daughter, Helen, 17, from their beds.

Peros is the owner of a coffee shop at 268 Fourth street, Ambridge.

He told Leetsdale police who investigated, that he had no known enemies nor had he been threatened.

STABBED YOUTH ACCUSES CHUM

CANONSBURG, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—A quarrel between two chums in their woodland shack last night resulted in the serious slashing of Clair Lane, 12, and the disappearance of Charles Gemmill, 16, both sons of well-known Canonsburg families.

Clair is in Canonsburg Hospital with his throat slashed, his head and face cut and several fingers nearly severed. He ran screaming from the shack last night, telling his parents the Gemmill boy attacked him.

About an hour later, a barn on the farm of S. L. Van Eman two miles from Canonsburg burned. Charles was a friend of one of Van Eman's sons and police believe he may have gone to the Van Eman barn, accidentally fired it and perished in the flames.

A posse searched all night for Charles but no trace of him was found. Police are probing ashes of the barn today.

Clair's father is Wilmer Lane, a painting contractor. M. R. Gimmill, Charles' father, is superintendent of the Standard Chemical Company's plant in Canonsburg.

ROSS KIDNAPING CLUE FAILS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Another clue in the strange disappearance 58 years ago of the kidnaped Charley Ross evaporated today into just another case of mistaken identity.

Miss Emma Kleinhertz, of Catskill, N. Y., had told police that William Bromson, a Bowery derelict who died March 22 on Welfare Island, had as a boy of 6 informed her he was the youth kidnaped from Philadelphia in 1874. She said she had papers to prove Bramson's story, but when police called at her home, they were informed she had mislaid them.

Meanwhile, investigators were informed by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rifley, of the Bronx, that Bramson was William Abramson, 52, adopted son of Victor Abramson, of Kickaton, N. Y., near Catskill.

'MET' ACCLAIMS U. S. GIRL DIVA

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Rose Bampton, from Buffalo and Cleveland, brought down the house at the Metropolitan.

From the "golden horseshoe" to the "family circle," the plaudits poured forth last night for the dark-eyed, shy lass who celebrated her twenty-third birthday with her New York operatic debut.

The opera was "La Gioconda." And after the second act the night belonged to Miss Bampton, who played the role of Laura, wife of the Doge of Venice.

The opera allowed the young prima donna ample opportunity for her mezzo-soprano voice. And the applause and praise from critics attested this quality.

Rosa Ponselle, in the title role of the ballad singer, gave way to the newcomer in the curtain call.

Gatti-Casazza, impressario of the Metropolitan for 25 years, did an almost unheard-of thing. He went back to his box after the first act and sat through all of the opera.

California Mayor Shot for $35 Holdup

SLAYER HOPED TO CHEAT DOOM

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The possibility Everett T. Mull, executed in the Nevada gas chamber, may have faced the ordeal with a hope of "cheating death" was voiced here today by Dr. J. C. Geiger, San Francisco city health officer.

Dr. Geiger said he had been authorized by Mull's relatives in North Carolina to take charge of the body after yesterday's execution "for experimental purposes."

A Morganton (N. C.) firm of attorneys, Dr. Geiger said, asked him to attempt to revive the executed man with an antidote to the poison used in the death chamber. The request was made at the suggestion of Mull from his death cell. Dr. Geiger said:

"If it was a hope, it was a fantastic one. Apparently it was thought he could revive Mull after he had been legally declared dead and that he would be free under the double jeopardy clause of the Constitution. It was an absurdity, as we informed those who requested it. Perhaps they did not so inform Mull."

2 Payroll Robbers Hold Up Newspaper

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Two men, both carrying revolvers, today herded nine men into a large washroom on the fourth floor of the plant of the Jewish Morning Journal, gathered up the $2,300 payroll of the composing room force and escaped.

BOND GIVEN BY M'CLOSKEY

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Johnstown's fighting mayor, red-headed Eddie McCloskey, today posted $2,000 bond for a hearing Saturday on charges of perjury and "releasing of commonwealth prisoners" from jail.

The hearing will be held before Alderman George Patterson, with whom bond was posted.

McCloskey, jovial as always, said he's sure "this thing" will be dropped after the hearing "because there's nothing to these charges. He presided at Council meeting today.

McCloskey was arrested yesterday following allegations of R. Milton Good, a private detective, that McCloskey perjured himself in swearing before the county commissioners that he was out of town on all three registration days prior to the November 8 election and that he also had freed prisoners from jail without authority.

The Johnstown City Council today appointed State Policeman Arthur T. Mahan to be civilian superintendent of police for one year at a salary of $3,000. Mahan was appointed on recommendation of Lynn Adams, superintendent of the state police, after Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, former police chief of Washington, declined the post.

Appointment of a civilian superintendent was recommended as a means of reorganizing the Johnstown police in a report by E. P. Goodrich, efficiency expert. Police chief C. E. Briney, whom Mayor Eddie McCloskey has tried to remove several times, will be given a furlough of six months without pay.

3 GAS STATION THUGS SOUGHT

Police today had found no trace of the three bandits who obtained $55 in the holdup of the Standard service station in the Boulevard of the Allies at Seneca street last night.

The trio, one armed, walked into the station and forced George Sharp, the attendant, to open a safe from which they obtained the cash. During the holdup a customer, William Roup, of 1838 Forbes street, was forced out of his automobile into the rear room of the station.

After rifling the safe, the thugs fled in an automobile.

LOUISA ALCOTT TRIBUTE PAID

CONCORD, Mass., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—An old-fashioned house beside a modern highway in the outskirts of historic Concord was a gathering place today of childhood memories.

Here, to Orchard House, from whose doors Meg and Jo and Beth and Amy trooped from the mind of their creator, Louisa May Alcott, 64 years old, came a pilgrimage of men and women and children to pay tribute to the author of "Little Women," on the centenary of her birth.

One hundred years ago today Louisa Alcott was born in Germantown, Pa. Little of her life was spent there, however. Her father brought his family to New England soon after Louisa's birth.

It was here that Louisa May found the means, with her pen, to provide a livelihood for the family. After many half-successful stories she wrote "Little Women." Since that day millions in every civilized country have read the book and are reading it today, as its publishers well know from the childish letters that still come to "Miss Alcott."

Mrs. Marie Cosgrave Dies in Italy at 86

FLORENCE, Italy, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Mrs. Marie Butler Cosgrave, 86, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a resident of Florence for 20 years, died of pneumonia late last night.

Her daughter, Miss Gertrude Cosgrave, with whom she lived here, and a son, Wallace B. Cosgrave, New York City, survive. After cremation, the ashes will be sent to Pittsburgh.

BAR TROTZKY IN SWEDEN

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Leon Trotzky, firebrand of the Soviet revolution, may be compelled to return to exile in Turkey on Thursday, when his Danish permit expires.

Officials said Trotzky apparently had failed in his efforts to enter Sweden, where he was to give a lecture, since the Danish government would not allow him to return through Denmark after his Swedish visit had ended.

Mrs. Trotzky was treated today for rheumatism by a doctor who said she would need treatment for six weeks. In view of this friends tried to prolong the couple's permit here.

This is Trotzky's first extended trip since his banishment for years ago. He is attempting obtain a new visa with the aid the local Social Democratic organization.

and public health work, and 13 economists or representatives of the public. Sixteen of the first, seven of the second and 12 of the third classification signed the majority report.

Two minority reports were presented along with personal dissenting statements from two individual members of the committee.

The principal minority report, signed by nine members and presented by Dr. Nathan B. Van Etten, of New York, made seven recommendations among them:

That the corporate (i. e., organized) practice of medicine be vigorously and persistently opposed as wasteful, inimical to high quality, or productive of unfair exploitation of the medical profession.

The majority of the committee found nine "deficiencies in the provision of medical service which seem to be within the power of the American people—professional and lay, separately or together—to overcome at the present state of medical knowledge." These included assertions that the people need a substantially larger volume of scientific medical service than they now utilize; that modern public health services need to be expanded to a far greater percentage of the people, particularly in rural areas, towns and small cities and that there is need for a geographical distribution of practitioners and agencies which more closely approximates the medical requirements of the people.

Medical Journal Attacks Findings of Committee

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The Journal of the American Medical Association, in its next issue, December 3, will impute bias to the majority report of the committee on the costs of medical care, and urge support of the minority report which was signed by members of the American Medical Association on the committee.

The editorial in the Journal, made public simultaneously today with the presentation of the report of the committee in New York, will say that the majority and minority reports "represent the difference between incitement to evolution and a desire for gradual evolution based on analysis and study." The Journal will say:

"The recommendations of the majority will not come as a surprise to the thousands of physicians who have followed closely the trend of the studies as indicated by the reports published from time to time since 1927. The director of its work, Harry H. Moore, Ph. D., published a book called "American Medicine and the People's Health," which revealed his personal bias for insurance schemes and, indeed, for governmental practice.

EXPLOITATION SEEN

"So definite was the trend of the committee's studies in this direction that one must view the expenditure of almost a million dollars by the committee and its final report with mingled amusement and regret.

"The rendering of all medical care by groups or guilds or medical soviets has been one of the pet schemes of E. A. Filene, who probably was chiefly responsible for establishing the committee on the costs of medical care and in developing funds for its promotion.

"The journal has pointed out repeatedly that such practices will mean the destruction of private practice; that they represent exploitation of physicians for the gain of business; that they put medical schools into unfair competition with their own graduates, and that they are, in a word, 'unethical.' Knowing the composition of the committee on the costs of medical care, it is interesting to find the pet plans of many of its members so sweely elaborated in the majority report."

TREAT A COLD IN THE FIRST STAGE

—and You Nip It in the Bud!

A cold ordinarily progresses through three stages: The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, 1 to 3 days; the Mucous Secretion Stage. Relief in the first stage is far easier than in the later stages. In fact, it is taking chances to let a cold run beyond 24 hours.

As soon as you catch a cold the wise thing to do is to take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. This famous tablet stops a cold quickly because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels. It kills the cold germs and fever in the system. It relieves the headache and grippy feeling. It tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack. That is the treatment a cold requires!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is effective, but harmless. Contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. For years it has been the reliance of thousands in all cases of colds and grippe. Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Get it today. Resent a substitute.

SANTA CLAUS TO PARADE

Santa Claus and reindeer will parade through East Liberty tomorrow afternoon.

Sponsored by the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce, the parade is designed to celebrate the Christmas season and will include 10 live reindeer drawing Santa Claus in a sleigh, costumed figures, a beauty pageant, bands and four calliopes.

The parade is scheduled to start at 3 p. m. and will move from the East Liberty Railroad Station down Frankstown avenue to Penn, thence to Negley, Rippey and Highland to Center. Along Center the line of march will continue to Frankstown avenue and disband after moving out Frankstown. At the close of the parade, Santa Claus and one reindeer will visit the Home for Crippled Children, Shady avenue.

The committee in charge of the parade is headed by Howard Mayberry, assisted by Henry Bluestone, F. A. Burdulis and Herbert Sanders. The business men's committee includes Herbert Mansmann, chairman; Daniel B. Hart, M. E. Hunsinger, M. Lipman, Joseph Price, Henry Steinlauf, George K. Stevenson and Fred Watkins.

SEEK CHALFANT BOARD OUSTER

Parents of Chalfant School district students who face expulsion from Union High School, Turtle Creek, unless the Chalfant Board of Education pays $1.80 in tuition arrears, today had filed a suit asking removal of the board. The defendants, R. R. Schultz, president; Francis Milewski, vice president, and Lewis Simek, Charles Krupa and Wilson Carl, board members, were given until December 12 to answer.

The plaintiffs charge the board has repeatedly refused to pay the tuition except to compel Chalfant students to attend East Pittsburgh High. The students prefer Union because it is nearer and offers more diversified courses.

The suit was filed by Attorney H. E. Carmack, on behalf of 19 parents.

'MODEL' SLAYER AWAITS FATE

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Sixteen-year-old Bert Arnold, hammer slayer of his step-grandmother, probably will know his fate Saturday.

He stood in a crowded courtroom yesterday and answered "guilty" when Judge John Prystalski asked him if he killed his relative, Mrs. Ellen Saxe, 60.

The state said it would not ask the death penalty and would content itself merely with presentation of facts, leaving to the judge the matter of punishment.

Refinery Fire Only $50 Blaze in House

Butler street fire companies early today responded to an alarm sounded from Box 547, Forty-seventh and Butler streets—the Atlantic Refinery plant. The fire, however, was in the basement of the home of Peter Gorup, 5732 Butler street, causing $50 loss.

Clothes Afire, Girl Burned to Death

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 29.—Beatrice Larew, of Royal, was burned to death when her clothing ignited from an open coal stove in her home.

STUDY SCHOOL TAX PLAN

The Board of Public Education today was to consider a recommendation by its finance and administration committee to approve a system permitting payment of school taxes in monthly installments, in the manner tax payments are now paid to the city.

The recommendation was made during a committee meeting last night at which action was also recommended that the board obtain a share of city funds for the feeding of poor school children.

Council has not provided money for feeding, but has given $100,000 to furnish shoes for needy children. The board already has asked Council to furnish money for food.

BOROUGHS TALK LIGHT PLANTS

Possibility of public-owned water and light plants in one or more of the North Boroughs is the newest development in the growing fight against high utility rates, as a result of a meeting of representatives of eight boroughs and townships in the northern section of the Pittsburgh community in Avalon Borough Hall last night.

The master commitees of the boroughs appointed a sub-committee to study operating costs of municipally-owned and operated water and light plants in Aspinwall, Sharpsburg, Coraopolis and Sewickley.

GUY LOMBARDO TAKES ADVANCE PEEP AT NEW DODGE SIX

New York, N. Y.—Guy Lombardo, personable leader of one of America's most famous dance orchestras, and musical idol of the younger set, deserted his baton today for an advance showing of the new Dodge Six.

"It's a hit!" was the enthusiastic comment of the rhythm king afterwards. And since Mr. Lombardo has been responsible for some of the biggest hits in the song world, his statement may be considered prophetic.

"The new Dodge Six will click with everybody who wants a smart, youthful car that is sporty and smooth. And it's so peppy! It has the zip and go of a snappy fox-trot, combined with the gliding ease of a dreamy waltz. It has everything the public wants—good looks, impressive power, flashing speed and brilliant performance. And when you add to that the amazing value represented by this great car you've got a combination that will take the country by storm."

GUY LOMBARDO

Although details of the new car have not yet been officially released by the Dodge organization, rumor has it that Dodge is prepared to spring a real surprise when the car is formally presented. According to reports, the new Dodge Six will be offered with an astounding array of features, at a radical low price which is going to completely upset all established standards of value in the motor car world.

TIME ALLOTTED TWO DEBATERS

Time allotments for the benefit debate between Clarence Darrow and Judge Michael A. Musmanno were agreed upon today.

Darrow and Musmanno will debate the question, "Does Man Live Again?" at Carnegie Music Hall, December 12. Proceeds will be used by the three Pittsburgh newspapers for relief funds.

Musmanno, taking the affirmative, will open with a 25-minute presentment. Darrow will answer in a 30-minute discussion. Musmanno has been allotted 15 minutes for rebuttal and Darrow 20. This arrangement leaves another 10-minute period for Musmanno's sur-rebuttal, giving each side a total of 50 minutes.

Goodwill Auxiliary To Hold Open House

The women's auxiliary of the Pittsburgh Goodwill Industries will hold "open house" for the public at the organization's buildings, Liberty avenue and Twenty-eighth street Thursday night. Men and women, physically handicapped, will be at work in the industrial departments. Bishop and Mrs. Adna W. Leonard, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, have been invited to the auxiliary's annual reception. The Emory Church Orchestra will provide music.

"Bogie," 33 minutes.

Cipher No. 15, published today, is a good one, presenting a new method of deciphering, yet simple and interesting.

One tip on the method of solution will be given. If you care to try your skill WITHOUT a clue, don't read further. If not, here it is:

Write the alphabet, vertically, and opposite the letter place the number from 1 to 26.

Commercial Use Of Area Opposed

A protest against an ordinance changing the district bounded by Stanton avenue, Hawthorne street and Old Lane from "B" residential use to commercial use has been received by City Council from the Stanton Heights Community Association. The protest was referred to the committee on Public Works yesterday.

Solution to Cipher No. 16

The cipher:

TFAOS	HOITU	ETLEC	STINC	UOSIE
RNTME	EYORD	SADEX	TWETX

The solution:

This is a transposition Cipher, of the alternate vertical variety. Read down the first column, up the second and so on. The message:

"The surest way not to fail is to determine to succeed."

CROWD GREETS LEGION CHIEF

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 29.—More than a thousand former service men from Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia greeted National Commander Louis A. Johnson, of the American Legion, at a banquet in the Scottish Rite Cathedral last night.

Johnson later addressed former servicemen and citizens in the Cathedral auditorium on the program of the Legion. He assailed the National Economy League for its attitude toward war veterans, and asserted the league should devote its efforts toward reducing the mounting state and local taxation rates instead of aiming at federal taxes out of which the rehabilitation of veterans is financed.

Paul H. Griffith, of Uniontown, state department commander, and Mrs. Erma A. Beable, of Shamokin, state department president of the Legion Auxiliary, were among the other guests.

Maj. Guy J. Wadlinger was master of ceremonies.

'Hill-Billy' Makes Bow On WCAE

Headed by Norma Terris and Helen Morgan, the all-star cast of Florenz Ziegfeld's last production, "Show Boat," which is billed currently at the Nixon Theater, comes to KQV microphones installed backstage at the Nixon to present a gala quarter-hour program tonight at 7:45.

Miss Terris

Other satellites scheduled to offer songs and sketches during the broadcast are Eva Puck, Sammy White, William Kent, Paul W. Keast, Bertha Belmore and the famous Jubilee Singers. The program opens with a brief word-picture of the typical backstage scene just a short time before the curtain rises. "Show Boat" was born on the Nixon stage; its first public performance was given at that theater just five years ago—on November 21, 1927.

That leading exponent of the type of American folk-music known as "hill-billy" and the sensation of the London theatrical world during the last season, Carson Robison, makes his bow with his "Pioneers" in a new series of two-a-week programs over NBC-WCAE tonight at 7:30. The feature, presented by the sponsors of Singin' Sam and the Old Singin' Master, will be heard each Tuesday and Thursday at the same hour during the period formerly occupied by Ray Perkins.

Program Pointers

John Charles Thomas, operatic baritone, sings one of his own compositions, "Mother," when he appears as the first guest soloist in the Tuesday night broadcasts of the Five-Star Theater over CBS-WJAS tonight from 10 to 10:30. Accompanied by Joseph Bonime's Symphony Orchestra, Thomas also includes among his selections, "Eri Tu," from Verdi's "The Masked Ball," and "My Lady Walks in Loveliness," by Ernest Charles.

Mr. Thomas

A program made up entirely of Irving Berlin's songs is the Sanderson-Crumit offering on WCAE at 8.

Gov. O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, and Harry F. Byrd, former Governor of Virginia, head the list of prominent speakers listed to appear on the You and Your Government program over NBC-KDKA at 8. Their topic is "Redistributing Functions of State and Local Government."

Eddie Dunstedter and the Fast Freight quartet, off the air for the last few weeks, return in a special one-time broadcast over WJAS at 9:30 tonight.

"The Texas Express Train Case," a dramatization of an attempted mail train robbery by a band of calculating and resourceful criminals, is the "Magic Carpet" story on WCAE at 10.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive relief. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm, clears the air passages, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in severe coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, used for generations for its healing effect on throat membranes. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

LISTENING IN

Tommy McLaughlin, the CBS baritone, never broadcasts without his scarab ring on his little finger . . . During his first recital as a professional he completely forgot the words in the middle of a song . . . so he stood mutely for a few moments, twisting the ring on his finger while the orchestra continued to play. The gesture seemed so natural that no one noticed that anything was wrong; Tommy recovered his composure and his memory and finished the song . . . Hence, the ring is sort of a superstition with Tommy.

Mr. McLaughlin

And speaking of superstitions: Although radio performers are not essentially that way, many of the actors and musicians in the "Myrt and Marge" skits started their careers in the theater, where superstitions abound, so . . . "Home, Sweet Home," or any fragment thereof, must never be played either in a production or in a rehearsal. They'll solemnly tell you of instances where theaters were closed after playing that musical bugaboo . . . The same goes for Tosti's "Goodbye" . . . Whistling before a performance is absolutely taboo.

On the performance that marked the start of their second year on the air, "Myrt and Marge" and virtually every other performer appeared at the studio in the identical costumes they wore on the opening night. They're considered lucky and have been packed away for the start of the third year.

Fred Uttal boasted once too often about his talents as a cook, acquired through his association with the Ida Bailey Allen broadcasts . . . His mother called his bluff and made him cook the Thanksgiving turkey.

Nobel Prize Winner Speaks Tonight

Dr. Irving Langmuir, winner of the 1932 Nobel Prize for Chemistry, is scheduled to speak over KDKA tonight at 8:45. The broadcast takes place immediately before he sails for Stockholm, Sweden, where the award will be presented December 15.

Dr. Langmuir, who is assistant director of the General Electric Research Laboratories, is the first American to receive the Nobel chemistry prize.

Seibel Discusses Louisa M. Alcott

George Seibel, dramatic and literary critic of the Sun-Telegraph, foregoes his weekly "Plays and Players" talk on WCAE tonight at 7 to discuss the life and works of Louisa M. Alcott, author, whose birth 100 years ago is being observed today.

Mr. Seibel has just returned from a four-day tour of Dayton, Indianapolis, Chicago and Milwaukee, during which he made eight addresses, including two from Chicago and Milwaukee radio stations.

Uncle Bob and Betty come to the WCAE microphone tonight to read the Sun-Telegraph "funnies," providing 15 minutes of rollicking comedy at 6 p. m.

Speaking into twin microphones in the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest news to WCAE and WJAS listeners today at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. He also is heard over WCAE at 2:15 today.

Tomorrow, all four of the Globe-Trotter's broadcasts are carried by both stations.

Globe-Trotting

—WITH—

The Sun-Telegraph's 'Globe-Trotter'

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen—

Here we are broadcasting through print.

There just seems to be no other way to handle all the questions that have been popping at the Globetrotter. From now on we are going to have this little space in the paper to reply to your requests and questions, and to pass on any good idea that comes from one Globetrotter to another.

In other words, this space will be all yours. From now on, instead of trying to answer six telepones at once, we are going to answer questions sent in by mail, so write what is on your mind to the Globetrotter in care of the Sun-Telegraph and he will worry somebody until he finds the right answer. Please write. Don't phone.

Let's begin by getting the "depression flower" settled once and for all. Of course you all know that six tablespoonsful of water, six of bluing and six of salt will produce a lovely flower when administered to several lumps of coal, especially when mercurochrome or green ink is added for coloring effect. But it was sort of surprising to find out that this same formula would be effective on practically any kind of metal or mineral, or even wood. The ultra-ultra in this sort of plant in the cotton orchard, using two teaspoonfuls of household ammonia with the above ingredients on ordinary absorbent cotton—braced by toothpicks or matchsticks. Or do you have a newer idea?

A natural question in most people's mind is what relation is our President-elect to the late Theodore Roosevelt.

Well, as far as we can discern all the Roosevelts in America are related. The family dates back to about 1645 when Claes Martenszen van Rosenvelt came from Holland and settled in New Amsterdam, now New York. Franklin Delano Roosevelt is a fifth cousin or fourth cousin once removed to the former President. Mrs. Roosevelt, as well as the wife of the President-elect, is his sixth cousin as she was Teddy Roosevelt's niece. Their name, originally Rosenvelt, means "Field of Roses."

We have had several questions asking about the churches attended by Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner and as soon as we find out we'll let you know.

Now, R. E. L., you wouldn't want me to say that, would you? "The play that confused the radio announcer and scoreboard operator for a moment in the Pitt-Notre Dame game was a touchback, so ruled because the impetus that sent the ball over the goal line was given by the kicking side, Notre Dame. The confusion arose because the ball touched Sebastian before bounding over the goal line, where Mike recovered it.

And is it true that the fireman at No. 1 Wilkinsburg let the stew burn on the stove while listening to the Globe Trotter the other noon time. They're real fans.

New Public School Program on Air

The first of a new series of educational programs, sponsored by the Board of Education of the Pittsburgh Public Schools and designed to demonstrate the extent of public school curricular studies and teaching methods employed, will be presented from the studios of KQV tomorrow at 1 p. m.

The program includes a safety talk by Dr. R. M. Sherrard, associate superintendent; a brief address by Elizabeth Hughes, 12-A Perry High School pupil, on "How a President Is Elected;" a discussion of Miss Hughes' talk by R. O. Hughes, of the department of curriculum study, and a reading, "The Highwayman," by Blaine Hinds, 12-A Perry pupil. In addition, J. C. S. Hull, teacher of drama at Perry, speaks on dramatic studies, and a trio composed of Ruth Concill, 'cellist, Earl Borg, violinist, and Herbert Hardie, pianist, all of whom attend Perry High, presents a musical program.

Pittsburgh Singers Give Recital

Three prominent Pittsburgh singers—Louise Taylor, soprano; Katherine Rhodes, soprano, and Carrie Mayer, member of Mme. Schumann-Heink's master class at Kansas City—present a "Memories of Love and Romance" program from the studios of KDKA at 4:15 p. m. today.

Guest, Alice Mock Program Stars

A lively review of musical comedy hits by Alice Mock, soprano, a male trio, and Josef Koestner's orchestra is listed on KDKA at 9 tonight. Included are "Lucky in Love," "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "He Loves and She Loves." Edgar Guest also contributes one of his poems.

Student Virtuosi Offer Solos

Solo numbers by three young student virtuosi, Celia Gomberg, violinist; Martha Halbwachs, pianist, and Howard Mitchell, 'cellist, are features of the Curtis Symphony broadcast over CBS-WJAS at 4:15 today.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

What do society women do when they have a moment to spare from their Welfare Fund work, regular duties on hospital boards, and their social duties? For one thing—needlepoint.

So many women are interested in needlepoint that Miss Mary and Miss Ruth Tebbetts, or the Misses Tebbetts as everyone calls these gracious women, opened their third annual needlepoint exhibit yesterday in their studio, Sheridan avenue, East End.

And there are more exhibits this year than ever before, and more visitors if the opening day is a criterion. The exhibit continues through Friday.

The exhibit is fascinating, including articles made by members of Pittsburgh's "400" and museum pieces of the art, lent by Pittsburgh folk.

Museum Pieces

There are chairs with needlepoint backs and seats and arm rests, needlepoint rugs, screens, pillows, stools and pictures.

One group that will catch the eye of those who go to the exhibit is a pair of quaint needlepoint and beadwork blue bedroom slippers, made in 1860 by Mrs. Henry M. Atwood and lent by Mrs. Moses Atwood, and a pair of sophisticated mules worked by Mrs. A. K. Collingwood.

Mrs. Stanley Brown is shown in the picture, holding the slipper.

Mrs. H. H McClintic also has an interesting pair of needlepoint mules in the exhibit.

The most ambitious piece of work is a rug—yes, a needlepoint rug! And it's 84 by 56 inches. And Mrs. William H. Mercur is the zealous artist. The rug, not yet finished, has an imposing place in the exhibit, and no wonder.

Rugs in Exhibit

There's something else that will take your breath away—Mrs. Robert Milligan has a needlepoint bathroom rug in the exhibit! And she's going to make another.

Needlepoint for a chair, the work of Mrs. John H. Waters, of Johnstown, started the first of the year, is in the exhibit.

And one of the most attractive pieces is a fireside bench in peasant style, worked by Mrs. C. W. Dahlinger. It is a copy of the needlepoint done by peasants in feudal times when they were allowed only two shades of yarn for their work.

Mrs. John S. Unger exhibits a fire screen depicting a school of fish beneath a ship in full sail. Mrs. C. E. Wilcock has several remarkable needlepoint chairs, Mrs. W. L. Mellon, a pillow, and Mrs. George S. Oliver, a pillow.

Fire Screen

There are many exquisite old pieces lent by their owners, including a collection of Viennese pocketbooks in silk petit-point. There are no less than 5,000 stitches to the inch.

There's a picture, owned by Mrs. T. C. Wurts and made by her great-grandmother, a stool made by Mrs. W. H. R. Hilliard's mother, a needlepoint picture of the angels proclaiming that Christ has risen, made by Mrs. H. D. Seller's mother, several old pieces, including a tapestry depicting the coat of arms of a Fifteenth Century pope, lent by Mrs. William Reed Thompson.

Smartly-Gowned Social Set at 'Show Boat'

That perennial favorite, "Show Boat," appearing again this week at the Nixon, last night attracted as smartly gowned a group of the smart set as has been seen at the theater this season. Mrs. George Pearson was there, and Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins, in a gown of royal blue lace and with her were her daughters, Elizabeth and Clara Dorothea. Elizabeth wore a most unusual creation of plum colored crepe shirred in all-over design, and a tiny jacket to match. Her sister chose red crepe.

I noticed Evelyn Evans, too, who was wearing white brocaded velvet with a very long coat of black velvet made with puffed sleeves. Phyllis Totten, too, was there, in black velvet, and Mrs. E. V. Babcock, in black lace. Black velvet, with rhinestones outlining the decolletage, was the choice of Mrs. George W. Wittmer III, and black velvet was also worn by Mrs. W. L. Mellon, Jr.

Emily Frew I noticed during intermission, chatting in the foyer, and she was wearing hyacinth-blue crepe, and Mary Franklin Robinson chose fern-green satin banded with fur, and Mrs. Raymond Nimick I saw wearing black velvet, having a square neckline and flaring sleeves. Mrs. George Gordon Crawford's costume was perhaps the most striking there, fashioned of deep peony-red velvet, having a tiny, formal design in blue-green and a girdle, a ruffle at the hemline, and collar, of plain red.

Dolores Keefe Is Married In Church

A pretty wedding was solemnized the morning of Thanksgiving Day in Sacred Heart Church, by the Rev. Thomas J. Murphy, of St. Richard's parish, when Miss Dolores Pearl Keefe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Keefe, became the bride of W. Franklin Collins, of South Graham street.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and carried white roses showered with lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Maria Holman, who wore poudre bleu and carried fall flowers. A. J. Keefe, brother of the bride, served as best man.

After the wedding breakfast in the Webster Hall Hotel, for 35 guests, Mr. Collins and his bride left for New York and Nassau. After December 5 they will be at home here.

THE NEW LOWERED WAISTLINE AS PARIS DESIGNERS SEE IT

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Out of all the fashion gossip about the new lowered waistline, there have come—from some of the more important Paris designers—a certain few dresses so ingeniously planned that the change in the waistline location seems a perfectly natural development in the fashions of the day. The dresses from one designer in particular—Augustabernard—make that change seem a definite possibility.

WOMEN WHO know how to make their own clothes, as well as those who know how to wear them well, have been watching with great interest this suggested fashion change. The eyes of the initiated have kept careful attention upon the way Augustabernard has, season by season, adjusted the waistline first this way, then that—experimenting to find the most satisfactory way of determining exactly where it should be to effect a wearable line. The result is today not an arbitrary Paris style, set by dictating designers, but a fashion which is definitely distinguished, yet not to "different" to be conspicuous.

Twentieth Century Club To Open Card Party Series Thursday

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The Twentieth Century Club will be busier than ever next month. The first of the season's card parties for members will be held Thursday under the whist committee's chairman, Mrs. Frank B. Gordon, and vice chairman, Mrs. Will Knox Dunlap. Something else new will be a dinner-dance on the ninth, an innovation which probably will be continued through January. Another unusual affair will be the children's Christmas play and entertainment on the fifteenth, which is being arranged by the drama committee.

The Monday morning lectures will be by Andrey Avinoff, of Carnegie Museum, who is to talk on "Russian Art and Architecture;" Louis Anspacher, whose subject will be "The Mob and the Movies," and Dr. Bruno Roselli, who will give an illustrated talk on "Art Along the Adriatic."

The contract bridge series will close with the afternoon sessions on the fifth and twelfth and evening sessions on the sixth and thirteenth, E. Hall Downes conducting.

Contract Series

The current interests committee will have a literary luncheon on the eighth when, in answer to "What Shall We Read?" book reviews will be given by Miss Thyrsa W. Amos, Mrs. Charles F. C. Arensberg, Miss Eleanor T. Crier and Mrs. David E. Jackman, Jr.

The music and art committee will present the club choral in a program of Christmas carols the afternoon of the twenty-second.

North American investors in South American bonds should look into the manner of government the loans promote, Carleton Beals, Latin-American authority, told the club members yesterday morning, speaking on "What Is Happening in Latin America." Mr. Beals spoke of the brilliant men from the countries to the south who have won recognition in many fields in the United States. He stressed the difference in background between this nation, founded for security and with a culture already established, and that of the South American countries, where the people are a mixture of natives and the Spanish cavaliers who entered the country for conquest alone. Economics and politics are as divergent as temperament, he observed.

Beals Speaks

The cultural struggle, the impact of the machine age and the depression have all contributed to the present state of affairs in South America. He said the countries look with suspicion on the United States, but this nation needs Latin America's markets and her friendships and if relations are to be mutually beneficial there must be justice. South America must be made to believe that the United States will not sacrifice her principles to safeguard her interests. The United States has penetrated South America to the extent of over $500,000,000, Mr. Beals stated.

A social service sewing will be held tomorrow by the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church. On Wednesday of next week the members will have their annual fairless fair and the drama group will read a play.

Emergency Fund Based on Waist Measurements

Like another local women's club which found itself temporarily handicapped on account of a bank closing, the Outlook Alliance has taken immediate steps to establish a new fund. To each member has been sent a miniature apron with a verse which instructs the recipient to measure her waist and place a penny in the apron pocket for each inch. Mrs. J. E. Crawshaw, Parkway drive, is receiving the aprons with their pennies in the pockets.

The need for the fund is especially urgent at present as the Alliance has already committed itself to certain philanthropic work and entertainment for the Christmas season, activities which it has maintained for many years.

Is an Unfaithful Husband Beyond Forgiveness?

If your husband confessed to you that he had been having an affair—

What would you do?

Would you remember the faithful, loving years when he had worked beside you, giving you everything he had?

Would you realize and respect the courage and honesty that made him confess his one mistake?

Would you acknowledge the mistakes which you, yourself, had made?

Or would you feel that he was beyond forgiveness, and cast him out of your life?

Lora would like to know; for this thing has happened to her. Dear Sally:

Will you please try to help me? I am nearly crazy, and I just can't seem to decide what to do.

It is my husband. We've been married 10 years, and I have been very happy. He has always been wonderful to me. We've had to work pretty hard, and haven't had a lot, but that didn't bother me. We both worked till two years ago, when his business got big enough so we could do without my pay check. It wasn't easy, and I had to economize a good deal after I quit working, so I guess maybe I let myself get a little stale. Anyway, I'll tell you just what happened.

It wasn't easy going for him, either, with conditions the way they've been for some time, and he worked awfully hard. About 10 months ago he began to go out evenings. He said he was going back to the shop; that he had to work like a beaver to keep things going. I believed him. I know that part of the time he was working. But I have found out since that part of the time he wasn't, too. He admits it himself.

HUSBAND CONFESSES

There was a girl who looked after the books in his office. She was very pretty and peppy, and dressed much nicer than I could afford to. She didn't have any responsibilities to pull her down, either, having no one but herself to look out for, and living in a hotel. So I guess she never looked tired or got a little dull or grouchy.

Anyway, two weeks ago he told me that he had something he must get off his mind—and then he admitted he had been having an affair with this girl.

He said he was telling me because he was sorry and ashamed, and wanted to get it all off his conscience, and he begged my forgiveness, and swore he would never do such a thing again. He wants to make a fresh start, and says he never really loved anyone but me.

What shall I do? How can I ever believe him or trust him again? Oh, I loved him so, and he has destroyed something in me! I think I still do love him, but—oh, I don't know! I don't feel as if things could ever be the same again. I feel as if I will suspect him every minute he is away from me. Shall I leave him, or shall I try to pick up the pieces and go on?

LORA.

FORGIVE AND FORGET

What shall you do, Lora?

That is a hard question, isn't it? And I know just how you feel about trusting him again. But remember this, my dear, when you think it over—

He didn't have to tell you. He did it of his own free will, because he is essentially honest, and wanted to come clean. That wasn't easy to do. And it proves that he is fine and trustworthy, in spite of his mistake.

You, too, made a mistake, and failed him. You went stale. You spoiled the thrill and adventure that once was in your marriage, and for a while this new girl seemed to bring it back to him; to make him feel stimulated and alive again.

And the chances are that neither of you will ever make these mistakes again.

So forgive and forget. Put the whole thing behind you, and give your marriage a new deal. Get new interests yourself, so you won't get into that slump again. And trust him. Believe in him. That's the best medicine on earth for sick spirits. And I'm betting that he'll live up to that trust if you give it to him.

Fay King Pities Children in Careers Parents Shape

By FAY KING

The young person who is ambitious along certain lines and receives no encouragement from parents or friends thinks nothing can be worse than that.

But the young person who is forced into a career that is more the ambition of parents than his own, knows that is infinitely worse.

The most unhappy youngsters I have ever observed are those who find themselves trained to fulfill the career parents longed for.

Mothers have made actresses and dancers of daughters who did not incline toward such a career. It was the ambition of the mother in her youth and she means to attain it through her daughter, or granddaughter.

To the last such parents moan over what they might have been and make their children miserable.

Ronald Reveals That He Heard Owens Talk

My heart ached for Ronald, struggling with that most terrible of all suspicions—that a person one has revered and loved has feet of clay. Yet until we found out all that he knew or suspected, we could give him no word of comfort.

"If you'll tell us first upon what you are basing your suspicions—what you overheard," Harry Underwood said gently, "then we'll be able to judge better what our own slight data is worth."

"Just a second!" Hugh Grantland said quietly, coming forward from the door which he had entered, unobserved by Ronald, a few seconds earlier. "Perhaps it will facillitate matters if you read this, and see if it is the conversation to which you refer."

He put into the boy's hands a duplicate of the report that he had brought to me. Ronald looked at him in astonishment, then gave a little exclamation of surprise as his eyes fell upon the first words.

"Read it through," Hugh admonished, and Ronald went on to the end. Then he looked up with terror-filled eyes at Hugh.

"Yes, I heard this," he said. "But how did you know?"

"Lee Chow also heard it," Hugh Grantland answered. "But why did you not come to the Underwoods with this story?"

There was something so bewildered about Ronald that I spoke hotly, quickly.

"Why should he?" I demanded. "He had no more intuition than the rest of us, who had no idea Owen meant this. What did you think was meant, Ronald?"

RONALD EXPLAINS

The boy was shaking visibly now, with bright red spots on his cheeks.

"I thought he was going to make another attempt to get Marion to promise to marry him," he said. "I knew he wouldn't have much chance to see her, and—after everything—it didn't seem my place to interfere. I already had done—things I didn't feel right about—and—I thought—if she did fall for him again, there wasn't anything anybody could do. But if I'd known he meant this—oh! God!"

He buried his face in his hands, and his silence was more heart-tugging than sobs would have been. I flashed an appealing glance at Harry Underwood, and he crossed to the boy and laid a comforting hand upon his shoulder.

"Don't blame yourself, Ronald," he said. "We all understand your position perfectly. No one could have foreseen this occurrence. Now look up and listen to something which may relieve your mind.

"Maj. Grantland has well-authenticated knowledge that Owen has been ill in bed in a hotel room in Philadelphia for two days, and Owen just sent a wire to your stepfather, who had notified him of the girls' disappearance, saying that he was ill there and forbidden to leave by his physician. So you see that puts him definitely in Philadelphia while this was happening."

WAIT FOR CHIEF

Ronald's face lighted.

"Oh! do you think so, sir?" he asked eagerly. "I'll never have any use for him again, but to think that he and maybe—my stepfather—might be involved in this awful thing—I just can't stand it."

"The alibi is certainly convincing," Hugh Grantland said, "and until we hear from Lee Chow, who is watching Owen as carefully as a cat watches at a rathole, I think we ought to consider other possibilities."

"What's your plan?" Dicky asked, and I wondered if I imagined a certain curtness in his manner.

"No definite one until the Chief gets here." My pulses quickened at the unmistakable reverence in Hugh's voice as he named my father—a reverence shared, however, by every man and woman under Charles Spencer's leadership. "But at daybreak," Hugh added, "I think those of us with cars could comb all the roads leading from Sackettsville, planning to get back to the village by 9 o'clock, the time named for our running up the white flag upon the pole."

"Good idea," Dicky commented, "but I'm afraid you'll have to count me out. I've a hunch that I can do better work in a different branch of the service. I'll leave our car for Madge, who is a better chauffeur than I am, and who can also do a better job of sleuthing. May I commandeer Wynne and his car for a little trip, Harry? I'll have him back here by daylight."

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Opening Bids

Experience has demonstrated that the correct choice of the Opening bid is the cornerstone of successful Contract. Definite minimums in regard to honor strength are an essential element of sound Opening bids of one. Given the definite minimums, the next thing is the choice of the correct Opening bid, whether it is a suit or no-trump. Because of the heavy penalties that are likely to fall, expert players soon discover that an Opening bid of one notrump, vulnerable, is an extremely dangerous bid, unless the hand is strongly studded with honor-tricks, because the fact that a notrump bid is the only one available denies the factor of favorable distribution. Because of this fact, there is a strong tendency in expert circles to greatly shade the requirement for biddable suits to avoid the dangerous notrump.

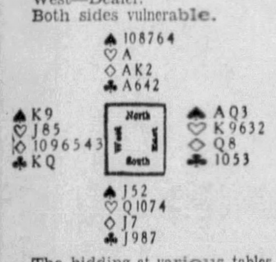
West—Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding at various tables followed different courses. Of course, West always passed, being vulnerable, and North, also vulnerable, unquestionably had an Opening bid. The question was—what? The best choice of an Opening bid, with North's hand, no doubt, was one spade, although in order to bid one spade he must disregard the requirements of biddability in a suit, as the spade suit was not only shaded, but sub-shaded. After a spade bid, East should have passed, South should have passed, and this should have ended the bidding. It did, in a number of cases, but at one table, North opened the bidding with one spade, East passed, South bid one notrump, West passed, North bid two notrump, East again passed, and South, carried away somehow by his glamouring wealth of ½ honor-trick plus, carried the bidding to three notrump, which was, of course, defeated by 2 tricks.

North and South's holdings were not the stuff that games are made of, and South's hand did not have the strength to keep the bidding open to give North a chance to speak again. If North was not strong enough to open with a Forcing bid of two in the first instance, then over one spade, which denied the possibility of a cheap response by South, South should have passed. A part-score on the hand is much better than a set, and no matter how firmly one may be wedded to the theory of giving partner a chance, South's holdings were not such as to justify carrying this policy to an extreme.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Is it absolutely necessary to rebid after having opened with a Forcing two-bid in a suit and partner has responded with a bid of two notrump, indicating a weak hand?

Answer: Yes. If the Opening two-bid is sound, there are many holdings with which the Responding Hand would be forced to respond with a bid of two notrump, and yet there would be an easy game in the hand. For example: Partner could hold 1 plus honortricks and still his response would be two notrump, if he held no biddable suit and lacked adequate trump support for your Opening bid.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

To be attractive and charming, a woman has to have brains that get up and go round like a wheel. The dumb ones if blessed with inherited good looks, can make pretty spectacles of themselves, but the intelligent woman goes considerably farther along the road of pulchritude. She is gracious. She has poise. She offers no rude criticism; she purrs and never scratches. Most of all she learns how to get along with her fellow creatures and that is half of life's battles. She cultivates tolerance, which gives to her countenance a beautific radiance.

Middle aged women who are cursed with a tendency to collect adipose tissue find most hateful and disfiguring a roll of flesh on the back of the neck. It will give way to a massage exercise if the rite is performed for five minutes twice a day. Clasp the hands together over the bump, turn the head from side to side with a hard pull on the muscles of the back. The flesh will lift first on one side and then on the other, as it comes in contact with the palms of the hand which must exert heavy pressure.

Packed away in the human mind are pleasant memories and those that aren't. When preparing to sleep, open the brain drawer that contains the pleasant thoughts, let the mind dwell upon them. This practice makes for restful slumber. To sleep so that the body makes necessary repairs, the mind as well as the body should be relaxed.

I receive many, many inquiries from persons who suffer from diabetes. They ask for information about diet.

Dr. Copeland

It is impossible to recommend one general diet for this disease. Each patient must have a special diet fitted for his particular case. What foods can be given must be determined after the amount of sugar present in the blood and urine has been estimated.

I am frequently asked, too, as to whether diabetes can be cured. Diabetes is not curable, but it can be controlled. With the discovery of insulin and the rapid advances made in the management of this disease, diabetes can be kept in check. Insulin does not cure diabetes, but as I have suggested, it controls the disease, so that the afflicted persons is assured his full span of years.

Even though there is no medicine known to mankind that will cure diabetes, the disease must not be considered as hopeless. Statistics show that the expectation of life of an individual suffering from diabetes can be made practically the same as that of one without diabetes. I am assuming that the patient will follow the prescribed diet and when necessary take insulin.

Not every sufferer from diabetes requires insulin. In this disease there is an inability of the body to take care of sugar. Excessive amounts of sugar accumulating within the body are dangerous. This defect can often be corrected by dieting. But if the excess in the urine or blood continues after carefully restricting the diet, insulin is necessary.

The diet is determined by the age, occupation and weight of the individual and his ability to burn sugar. Bread and other starchy foods must be limited in quantity. Milk and sugar, as well as foods containing these substances, are not permitted. The amount of food given is measured in "caloric units." The number of calories necessary to keep the individual at a certain weight is carefully determined.

Rather than being overweight, it is better that the diabetic be a few pounds less than the average weight for his age and height. Over-nutrition and obesity must be avoided. If the afflicted individual does not gain on the diet prescribed, more food may be allowed. If he gains too much weight, less food should be given.

It is imperative that all cases of diabetes be under the personal attention of a physician. His aid and advice are necessary to determine the diet and progress, and to decide about the administration of insulin.

All sufferers from diabetes should have the urine examined at regular intervals. Occasionally the blood should be examined to determine the amount of sugar present. This is important because in many cases traces of sugar may be found only in the blood.

In former years a sufferer from diabetes requiring a major operation was considered a great risk. Recovery and convalescence were difficult because little was known about diabetes. Today major surgery as well as emergency surgery can be accomplished with a high degree of safety.

May I warn you against carelessness in infections. No diabetic should consider any abrasion or infection lightly. At all times the skin should be kept clean and unbroken.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Personal Note of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My former husband died recently. He was practically alone here, his nearest of kin being his sister, who lives a great distance from here. That is, nearest of kin, excepting our small son, a boy of 10.

I attended to all funeral arrangements and all details.

Many floral offerings were received . . . practically all were expressions of sympathy to me by my personal and office friends. I have now to answer these. I have been supplied with the acknowledgement cards by the undertaker. Should I use these, and if so, how should I sign them? My sister-in-law's name, my son's and my own? Or have you any other suggestions to offer?

I neglected to state that I never remarried . . . and I retained my marriage name.

READER.

What a fine sense of goodness and friendship you have, dear lady, and how I admire you for what you have done.

I'm glad you wrote me about using these ready-made acknowledgment cards. I'd so much rather you wouldn't use them, even if apparently they make the task of acknowledgment easier. They aren't in good form, and they aren't in good taste. For such personal and friendly acts and thoughts as these, we should write a personal and friendly note of thanks and gratitude. So by all means, please do this.

Use the usual double-sheated letter paper, and write something like this:

Dear Miss Graham:

You were very kind to send me such a friendly and understanding letter of sympathy, and I appreciate it deeply. The roses were beautiful and brought me a touching message of your friendship. Thank you, with all my heart.

Most sincerely yours,

White clothes

COME OUT Whiter

● WHEN WASHED WITH CLIMALENE

Every woman knows how she wants to do her own washing. Few agree which way is best. But no matter, add Climalene, two tablespoons or so, to your washing water. ● Climalene instantly takes the harshness out of hard water. Makes it soft as rain water. ● White clothes come out whiter, immaculately clean. Colored clothes come from the washing far cleaner and fresher with no faded colors, no spots, no streaks, no dingy gray look. You use only ¼ the soap you ordinarily use. Climalene not only makes soap and water more effective, which saves ½ the time of washing, but instantly dissolves all dirt and grease. ● It also makes glassware and china sparkle like new, renews floors and woodwork, polishes silverware without rubbing, yet your hands stay soft and smooth. ● Just try Climalene. Your grocer has it in the bright, shiny blue box, 12 ounces 10c, and 32 ounces 25c. You'll be glad you did. The Climalene Company, Canton, Ohio.

COX GETS BIDS FOR DUQUESNE CACHETS

Father Cox is in receipt from stamp collectors and others of quite a few bids for the 100 commemorative Fort Duquesne cachets donated to him. These covers, or envelopes, bear the special design created for the anniversary of the evacuation of Fort Duquesne and the Washington Bicentennial 3-cent stamp bears the cancellation of the Pittsburgh Postoffice under date of November 25. There are 100 of these covers available and they will go to the highest bidder. The funds obtained will be applied to the relief work of Father Cox.

Father Cox was asked yesterday what he needed more urgently than food, or money to buy food, and he immediately replied:

"We need shoes for men, women and children. Out at Coxtown the men are willing to work, but their bare feet are on the ground. In our breadline we find many men in the same condition. We do not necessarily have to have new shoes. If people will send in old ones, we will put them in our repair shop and mend them so that they will be in shape to keep the feet warm and dry."

So, if you have any old shoes to spare send them to Father Cox at Old St. Patrick's. He will put them where they will prevent a lot of suffering. And it won't do any harm to slip some cast off clothing into the bundle—clothing that will be good for needy men, women and children.

In the meantime the public is responding in a gratifying manner to the Sun-Telegraph subscription drive by which Father Cox gets a liberal cash commission for every subscription sent in on the blank on this page or on the special cards he and his co-workers are distributing.

Nothings I Never Knew Till Now

That if Royalty enters a Yurropean restaurant, you mustn't embarrass 'em by staring or insult 'em by not looking at all.

That you lose social caste (but gain a discount) if you pay your fashionable London tailor cash on the spot.

That Gilbert and Sullivan, the greatest composing and writing team in all history, were usually snarling and wrangling.

That the King of England is no rubber-stamp monarch. Geo. V. does a good bit of actual ruling between cornerstone laying.

That in England, the humbler the job, the loftier the high-hat (banks and clerks and messengers), wear tall millinery in the ritzy manner, and so do many of the truck-drivers.

That 100 men working steadily in less than a dozen brick plants can produce all the bricks that the country needs. (Including those required by the dramatic critics).

That butter is the one food which may be artificially colored—without being so labeled. (And it is pure food, yet!)

That in the Temple of Heaven, in Pekin, China, the dome representing the sky is a rare color for which the formula has been lost, all efforts to match it failing, despite powers of modern science.

That if you go ritzy and call it "toe-mah-toe"—you do so without authority from the dictionary—so act your age.

That the total capacity of the United States industrial equipment is one billion horsepower, which does the work of ten billion men, or five times the earth's total population. (Oh, a mathematician, huh?)

That Iowa is the only state in which poison ivy won't grow.

That because of the business crisis, one of the most commonly made errors in English grammar is to use "loan" as a verb, instead of "lend." (It is strictly a noun, and a hard one to find, at that.)

That a German spy served during a large part of the World War in the British censor's office. Yop, he's telling all in a book!

That several London gossip writers and columnists are Lords and Sirs, belonging to the Nobility with a capital N.

That a London publisher and a local one are plotting an American-English and vice-versa dictionary, so that travelers will know that a "hair-dressing saloon" is really a barber shop, and a "goods-train" is a freight-train, etc., etc.

That every British item today and several others were written by a Yank publisher while riding the skies there. (What a pal!)

That the cancellation mark (with lines) on your postcard originally represented the Stars and Stripes.

That Francine Larrimore got her name off a drug store window when she decided she didn't like "Adler."

That the stock exchange has 70,000 miles of phone and telegraph wires. (No wonder those stocks take so long going up!)

That every boil or pimple you have saves you $5 in health, because it takes that much poison out of your system.

That if every structure on Manhattan Island were destroyed and the entire community rebuilt with the latest inventions the reconstruction would pay for itself in 20 years.

That the first U. S. soldier in France (during the late war) was a colored boy. (See p. 93, "American War for Humanity.")

That some hotels have a better idea. They install radios in every room, but you may get your own stations by inserting a dime.

That years ago baggy trousers were a sign of genius. Nowadays they are a sign of the times.

That Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, ntver allowed one in his own office! And when it became an institution, and a general nuisance to people, he often expressed his regret that he had ever thought it up in the first place!

That there is a town called Burke, Idaho, which boasts that it is the only place in the world with streets paved with silver.

That a lot of people are very sorry Hoover wasn't re-elected because they won't be able to knock him any more.

That the Budweiser clock in Times Sq., which has the loudest "chimes" in the whole-mid-town section, hasn't chimes at all.

The enormous sounds emanate from a phonograph record.

Personal to "Hall!" Okay! Let me know.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Another dramatic premiere is to be seen in the Nixon next week, when Ina Claire makes her first appearance here in several years in "Biography," which will be the third subscription offering of the American Theater Society. It is by S. N. Behrman, author of "Brief Moment," which had a run of 128 performances in New York last season. It is a Theater Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, who will be in Pittsburgh throughout the engagement in the Nixon. In the cast will be Earle Larimore, prominent Guild player, last seen here in "The Good Earth;" Jay Fassett, who played the male lead here last season in "As Husbands Go;" Charles Richman, Mary Arbenz and Helen Salinger. Thursday will be seat day at the box office.

Next week the George Sharp Players in the Pitt will be seen in another of last season's New York successes, "The Devil Passes," the author of which is Benn W. Levy. Hunter Gardner, who recently played in "Zombie" in New York, will have a feature part in the coming play, while Alden Chase will portray the role originally acted by Basil Rathbone. The play, which has a food-for-thought theme, deals with an earthly visit of the Big Shot of Hades, all dolled up in the garb of a preacher. Regular members of the Pitt resident company will support Mr. Hunter.

Tonight in Cleveland Katherine Cornell will make her bow in "Lucrece," translated by Thornton Wilder from Andre Obey's "Le Viol de Lucrece." The premiere will take place in the Hanna, where Miss Cornell made her first appearance in her recent great success, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Back in Port, 'Show Boat' Shows Kern and Ferber Stand Time's Test

By GEORGE SEIBEL

After five years it is possible to ask and answer the question why this "Show Boat," which started from the Nixon, has sailed triumphantly around the world. And the answer is not difficult. Last night the musical romance made from Edna Ferber's fine novel was again heard at the Nixon, and the answer is taken from the text of the popular "Can't Help Lovin' That Man." You can't help loving this old-fashioned romance magnolia-scented and honey-sweet. "Show Boat" is likely to be to our musical drama what "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was to the old theater. Like "Old Man River," it will just keep rolling along.

Mr. Seibel

Having heard it at least four times, and having endured the screen version with fortitude born of equanimity, I still sat through the performance to the finale—and not from a sense of duty. Even had it been a sense of duty, virtue would have been rewarded when Norma Terris gave some most amusing imitations of Ethel Barrymore, Lenore Ulric and Greta Garbo, almost at the last, and Una Val did a brilliant tap dance. But the entire near-opera from the eighteen-eighties to the nineteen-thirties is just as enjoyable as when it was first seen and heard.

There have been changes—Charles Winninger and Jules Bledsoe are not in this cast—but the substitutes are in every way worthy of their antecedents.

EVA AND SAMMY

The pleasantest survivors of the earlier cruise are Eva Puck and Sammy White, who enact the pair of vaudeville comedians with native humor, agility and sincerity. For a low comedy couple to achieve real pathos is not easy—they do it.

There is Norma Terris, too, who sings as sweetly and lives the tender romance as convincingly as when she first essayed the role of Magnolia.

Joe is now sung by Robert Raines, who has a magnificent baritone voice for "Old Man River," though his acting is not up to that voice. Angeline Lawson is the Queenie, and she too sings well, though her acting is strident where Aunt Jemima was unctuous.

The one that is not the same, but even better than before, is Helen Morgan as Julie. If her voice is a shade off, perhaps, her dramatic work has prospered vastly—in repressed emotion she achieved some effective moments.

THE NEW CAP'N ANDY

William Kent is the new Cap'n Andy, and with a much drier personality than Winninger, he manages to score every point just as well. Paul Keast is the new Gaylord Ravenal, and is admirable in his vocal work as he is romantic in his appearance.

Francis X. Mahoney as Rubberface, Jack Daley as the Backwoodsman, Bertha Belmore as Parthenia, all added to the joy of life and the pleasure of meeting an old friend.

For no words fit this "Show Boat" more exactly than "old friend." It is a libretto that has behind it a story well put together about characters that are flesh and blood. Edna Ferber furnished all that. But there is a score by Jerome Kern that has everything it should have—tender lyrics, ringing choruses, dances rich in rhythm—like the good old "Bohemian Girl" and "Martha" scores of the eighteen-eighties.

"Show Boat" is five decades of American history set to music and put on parade. Happy mariners who come to the Nixon levee this week!

Rasputin in Cinema With Alpine Film

That very impressive film drama of Rasputin, the Holy Devil, is back again in the German Cinema on Liberty street, with gruesome pictures of the filthy fanatic who ruled the Czar's court through the superstitions of the women. Nikolai Malikoff as Rasputin is worth seeing, and as the titles are in English, everybody can follow the story.

It is a double bill, the other picture being one of those remarkable Alpine climbing films that leave half the audience gasping over the hairbreadth escapes of the daredevil climbers, the other half wondering how it's done. "The Devil's Rope" depicts Edward Whymper's ascent of the Matterhorn in rivalry with Toni, a native guide. Avalanches and breaking ropes furnish the thrills, plenty of them.

Connolly in Hospital, Hired by Telephone

Walter Connolly was hired for his role in Frank Capra's "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" by a phone call from Hollywood to Chicago which reached him while he lay ill in a hospital.

Come-Back

Clara Bow returns to the screen in "Call Her Savage," which will be the Stanley feature, beginning Thursday.

Mary Is Busy On Cast

BY HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.

With most of Hollywood in a post-holiday lull, Mary Pickford became very busy lining up a cast for "Secrets," which gets under way here today.

As the deadline approached, Doris Lloyd has been chosen for the role of Aunt Susan, while Mona Maris, exotic Latin beauty, was momentarily expected to sign for the part of "the other woman."

One of the casting problems facing Mary and her aids is to find a set of four children and their adult prototypes. Dozens of youthful applicants were interviewed and tested at the United Artists Studio.

Mary hopes to have her picture finished by Christmas, but is making no definite plans for the holidays. "Secrets," she feels, is the best story she has had in some time, and she also is much interested in leading the screen back to romance.

As soon as she finishes her next picture, Loretta Young plans a Honolulu trip with Ruth Cotley, interior decorator, as companion.

Many Hollywood stars went over to the Pasadena Community Playhouse to bid Sharon Lynne goodbye on the eve of her departure with the road company of "Brief Moment." Virginia Bruce and Jack Gilbert were there, also Dolores del Rio and Cedric Gibbons, Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur and Sandra Shaw and John Negulesco.

Sharon Lynne

During Sidney Fox's absence in Europe, Negulesco has been Sandra's escort on a number of occasions.

Another farewell party will be at the Frolics tomorrow night, when Eddie Garr appears for the last time before going east to join the Lew Brown-Ray Henderson show, "Strike Me Pink." Leo Carrillo, Barbara Stanwyck, Frank Fay, Madge Evans and possibly Jimmy Durante will be on hand. Garr's imitation of Durante is one of the best bits of mimicry seen out here this year.

At Bob Armstrong's stag party, some of the people didn't believe Warren Hymer when he said he could get out of a straitjacket. The funny part of it is, he can. He's also an expert at card tricks, and has done everything from attending Prof. Baker's 47 workshop to working as a circus acrobat.

With Ralph G. Farnum selected as official talent scout, the National Broadcasting Company will try an unusual experiment in Hollywood. Instead of bringing candidates to New York for auditions, it will conduct try-outs over a leased wire from Hollywood. The broadcasting company pays all expenses for this private audition.

Pictures Here This Week

"The Phantom of Crestwood," film version of a radio serial mystery story, begins a four-day showing on the Davis screen today.

"Strange Interlude," featuring Norma Shearer and Clark Gable, is now in the second week of its showing on the Aldine screen.

"Three On a Match," with Ann Dvorak and Joan Blondell, will show on the Enright screen from tomorrow through Friday.

The Sheridan Square feature for three days, opening tomorrow, will be the Ricardo Cortez film, "The Phantom of Crestwood."

Beginning Thursday the Fulton screen attraction will be Constance Bennett, Joel McCrea and Paul Lukas in a comedy-drama, "Rockabye."

Thursday in the Stanley, the screen feature will be the return of Clara Bow in her first picture in more than a year and a half, "Call Her Savage."

The Penn, beginning Friday, will present on its screen a picture titled "If I Had a Million," with a cast including Gary Cooper, Wynne Gibson, W. C. Fields, George Raft and others.

Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis and Herbert Marshall head the cast of "Trouble In Paradise," an Ernst Lubitsch production, coming to the Warner screen Thursday.

Beban Sketch Feature Of Academy Bill

A dramatic sketch, "The Sign of the Rose," made famous by the late dramatic star, George Beban, is featured in "Spic and Span," current at the Academy. Benny Moore, portrayer of Italian characters, plays the former Beban role, supported by Eddie Aiken, Peggy O'Neil and Billie Diamond. Interspersing the musical numbers of the show, which is in two acts and 34 scenes, are several comedy sketches. The most elaborate is "Bug House Justice," in which the entire cast of 12 principals appear. Alice Duval and Mary Walton, solo dancers, Billie Diamond "blues" singer and the Lopez Sisters, contribute specialties.

Jones' Horse, Silver, Wins 'Degree'

Silver, the white horse Buck Jones rides in his stirring outdoor dramas, is regarded as one of the most intelligent horses that ever lived. While Silver was making scenes with his master for Columbia's "The Sundown Rider," Jones was approached by a group of psychology professors of the University of Southern California, who wished to make tests with him. Silver passed with flying colors and was awarded the first equestrian college degree, a B. H. S.—Bachelor of Horse Sense. Some horse, eh, what!

Lillian Miles Known By Three Names

Lillian Miles, Columbia's new "discovery" who makes her screen debut in "Plainclothes Man," has been known at different times as Lillian Miles, Millie Sonde and Lillian Bradley, her real name?

Double Bills For Davis

Beginning Saturday the Davis will offer two first-run features as its permanent policy, the same features to appear at the same time in the Regent theater in East Liberty. The first double-feature bill will be Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "Sherlock Holmes," with Clive Brook, Miriam Jordan and Ernest Torrence, and "They Call It Sin," with Loreta Young and George Brent. Each double-feature program will run for an entire week in each house.

The second double-feature first-run bill will be Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Nancy Carroll in "Scarlet Dawn," and Jack Oakie, Zasu Pitts, Louise Fazenda and Sidney Fox in "One Hour in a Lifetime."

Spitzer Kohen, from Warner Brothers Regent theater in Elizabeth, N. J., is the new manager of the Davis, succeeding J. A. McDonald, who is now at the Palace theater.

Joan Marsh to Lead In 'Obey the Law'

Joan Marsh, leading woman in Columbia's "Obey the Law," is the daughter of Charles Rosher, one of the few great cameramen of motion pictures. He photographed the parting of the Red Sea in "The Ten Commandments" and many other noted films.

Crook Drama Diverting In Pitt

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Crook dramas are always interesting, and "Whistling In the Dark," this week's production of the George Sharp Players in the Pitt, is especially interesting because, for one thing, it keeps the audience guessing about something else besides who killed old Banker Hardcash. There isn't even any Banker Hardcash. Futhermore, there is only one murder in it, and one doesn't have to bother about who did it because everybody knows all about it.

Yet it is a mystery play and a corking good one, too. It is one that involves a writer of crime stories, played by Hugh Banks, in a matter that requires him to use all his ingenuity as a planner and solver of crimes. You see, Hugh, for no good reason at all except that of making a pleasing play, wanders right slap into the headquarters of a gang of crooks who want to put a high official of the law "on the spot." So Hugh, and his fiance, who happens to be along, find themselves in a sort of jam just for looking into a house with the idea of renting it.

THE PERFECT CRIME

Since Hugh is, by his own admission, a creator of puzzling crimes, he is given just 12 hours in which to think up a way whereby the gang can do away with the man who has promised to do away with them. If he doesn't—well, too bad. So he does figure out a perfect method of murder—one beyond the possibility of detection. Then all he has to do is to figure out a perfect way to keep it from working after he has revealed it to his captors—also a way to escape—for, of course, they have no intention of letting Hugh and his girl friend go free.

And that's what the audience has to cudgel its brains about, instead of who killed Old Banker Hardcash. It's a new angle in mystery plays, and a real diverting one. You'll just have to go and find out how it's done, for we couldn't think of letting you in on the secret, because that would spoil the play for you.

HOME-COMING NIGHT

It was a home-coming for Hugh, and we are glad to note that he kept in character and did not bow when a gust of applause greeted his first entrance. Hugh did a right smart job of making his cock-sure author credible, and Betty Hanna made a pleasing companion to him as a comforter and bucker-up during the time he had to scheme a plan to murder a man in such a way that it wouldn't hurt the victim in the least.

Sam Flint played with his customary finesse in making plausible a hard-boiled gang leader. Baker Moore, as a "dope," Roy Elkins, as a shady druggist ally of the gang, and Ted Thompson and Charles Webster, as gangsters, all did their work as though they were regular racketeers. Ella Ethridge hadn't a word to say throughout the three acts—yet was important.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

ABOARD THE S. S. REX, GENOA-BOUND: Last night, at midnight, we arrived at Gibraltar. I wish I could describe to you the glories of the town and the beauty of the famous rock as it towers over the Mediterranean. These things I cannot do—for the simple reasons that it was dark as the devil, the boat stopped for no more than 10 minutes and I couldn't see a thing.

That's the sad part of hurried travel. I have but 10 months to make this tour, and it should take me at least 10 years. I would have enjoyed getting off at Gibraltar, journeying at a leisurely pace through Spain and describing the various senoritas as I went. And what have I now? Nothing but darkness and a few Americans in a smoking room. That's fine compensation.

And what did the Americans say? The usual thing. One gentleman told a story. Another related the number of buttons he had made for the trade during the year of 1931. And a third man pounced upon the opportunity to say that, if America didn't come to its senses in 1933, we'd have another war in short order.

You don't need me, I'm certain, to tell these things. Smoking room and barroom conversations are the same the world over. Regardless of the conversation, you can always find two men who will argue.

Whether it be a pullman from New York to Pittsburgh, or a boat from Algiers to Marseilles (Hellinger knows his onions, boys), you must run into the same arguments. Nobody ever wins these discussions, but it does help to pass the time. And why does one want to pass the time? To get into other discussions, of course.

But let's get serious for the moment, as long as the moment is not too long. Grab a load of a few of the conversations that took place around me earlier tonight. If they don't make sense, don't mind it. I put them down as I heard them.

And remember, please, that these remarks come from sensible people who are bound for distant European points on business and—in a few cases—pleasure:

"I told Henry to take his heavy underwear but he wouldn't listen to me. He said it wouldn't be cold in Italy in November. He's been that way ever since we were married 25 years ago. And he's always been sorry."

"It's a wonder they wouldn't put more Americans on these Italian boats. How do they expect the average Detroiter to make himself understood?"

"Sit down, my dear. And has your husband retired already? Tch, tch. What a shame! He's such a charming man. A trifle too old for you, of course, but that's the way life goes. Shall we take a turn around the upper deck?"

"I have a partner in my business. We manufacture eyelets. When his wife sailed for Europe, my partner came in with tears in his eyes. I asked him the trouble. He said: 'Just when I want to get away from business, I take my wife to the boat. And what does she sail on? The Eyelet de France!'"

"We reach Gibraltar in an hour or so. Haven't you heard about Gibraltar? Why, my dear, it's the most wonderful place. Made famous by an American insurance company, you know. Why, of course. No boats ever stopped here until the company began to use the pictures in its advertising."

"And I tell you, gentleman, that unless the war debts are fully repaid, the city of Boston will suffer in common with all the rest of America!"

"I tried to feed her a bottle of wine in my cabin last night, but she wouldn't go for it. I tell you again, boys, you can't trust these foreign dames!"

And so it goes. Far, far into the night . . .

Tomorrow we will arrive at Nice in the morning and Genoa around 1 o'clock. I think I'll write my next column from Genoa. I should have plenty to tell you by that time.

And just one thing before I continue. If these columns have a slight tinge of the Alice-in-Wonderland about them, please forgive me. I'm really enthused about this trip—and, to a slight degree, I hope you'll feel the same way. It's not the kick of the moment. I'm a trifle too world-weary for that. It's the thought that there's something swell to tell you about just around the corner.

I hope you'll understand . . .

And now for the last item of the day. It's an actual story that was unfolded to me this morning by Jimmy Ceribelli, a grand kid from New York. I haven't picked up too many yarns this trip, but this one from Jimmy should hold us for awhile. And it's positively true.

Some five months ago, one of New York's most notorious gunmen entered the office of a splendid tailor on Fifth avenue. The gunman had all the earmarks of his trade. His ears were cauliflowered. His lower lip hung low. His right cheek bore a hideous scar. His left eye was partially closed from a very apparent knife wound. All in all, he was a gentleman you would not have enjoyed meeting in the dark.

He ordered four of the finest garments in the place—and he had but one request in connection with the making of them. The trousers pocket on the right side must be extra large. He made no bones about the reason for the request. He wants to carry his gun in that pocket.

The tailor, of course, did precisely as he was requested to do. He made the particular pocket very large. When the gunman came in for his first fitting, he very carefully removed his revolver from the old suit and placed it in the new. The fit was excellent, and the gunman ordered the tailor to go ahead.

When the time arrived for the last fitting, the tailor was curious. He had learned that the gunman was not nearly so dangerous as he looked and that it was not at all impossible to talk to him. So, as he marked a few loose spots on the final suit, he talked to his notorious customer.

"You carry a gun with you all the time?" he asked.

"Sure," returned the gunman. "Why?"

The class tailor shrugged his shoulders.

"I don't know," he replied. "I was just curious, I guess. I never had a customer just like you. Would you mind very much if I looked at your gun?"

The customer laughed.

"Why not?" he said. "It's a pip. Here."

He handed it over. The tailor took the weapon and turned it over gingerly in his hand. He saw an inscription, and he read it. And he almost fell at the feet of the brute before him.

"To Bob," the inscription read. "From Mother." . . .

'Ben Hur' of Stage in Cowboy Role

Robert Frazer, the "Ben Hur" of stage note, who, before coming into pictures, played in exactly 400 stage productions, and who will be seen as Tim McCoy's cowboy pal in Columbia's "Fighting For Justice," was educated in Boston and apparently has a Bostonian's zeal for deep learning. Frazer is a student of Egyptology and paelontology. He both reads and writes Egyptian hieroglyphics.

Paelontology is the study of fossils and it seems strange that a prominent actor cannot find anything more lively than fossils to study.

Movie Prize Winner To Get It Tonight

Grace Moore Price, Pittsburgh girl who won the first prize of $1,500 in the national "Phantom of Crestwood" contest, will receive the winner's check in the Davis tonight at the 9 o'clock performance. "The Phantom of Crestwood" was broadcast serially by the National Broadcasting Company and the contest was based on the best final chapter to the play. The picture opened today in the Davis for a four-day engagement.

'Sir Galahad' Role Hymer's Ambition

Warren Hymer, the tough valet of Columbia's "The Night Mayor," has one predominant ambition—to portray some medieval nobleman of Sir Galahad on either the stage or screen, despite the fact that he was born on Avenue A, in New York's famous East Side?

HERE'S THAT QUICK WAY TO STOP A COLD

That Doctors Advise As The Fastest, Surest Way

FOLLOW DIRECTIONS IN THESE PICTURES

Take 1 or 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.
Drink Full Glass of Water.
If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of warm water and gargle according to directions.

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

If you have a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throat eases this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drugstore.

It's Time To Choose

Monogrammed Gifts

A monogrammed gift has a personal, individual touch that distinctly labels it "his" or "hers"! It gives the thrill of someone's thoughtfulness. Better make your selections now, while ample time remains. We are well prepared to make the following items distinctive for you:

Greeting Cards

Our stocks are "chock-full" of clever and reserved Christmas cards. We are prepared to engrave or monogram them for you!

Leather Goods

If you're giving a handbag be sure it has a chic metal monogram! We also monogram trunks, bill folds and traveling cases of all kinds.

Handkerchiefs

For men, women and children—in colors or white—made lovelier if monogrammed by hand. These take time, so order now.

Jewelry and Silver

Nothing will please the hostess or bride-to-be more than her own initials on gleaming silver. We also monogram compacts, picture frames, cigarette cases and jewelry of all kinds.

Stationery

Stationery with one's monogram is a gift for sophisticated taste. It's also smart to have your playing cards, poker chips, match cases and all bridge accessories personally marked.

Men's Furnishings

WELFARE FUND APPEALS TO 50,000 FOR SMALL DONATIONS

FIRST FEDERAL HOME LOAN DUE TOMORROW

Bank System Directors To Meet Here; Best To Attend Session

The first loan to a member of the Pittsburgh Branch of the Federal Home Loan Bank is expected tomorrow when the board of directors meets at the banking rooms, Liberty avenue and Ninth street.

In Washington, Franklin W. Fort, chairman of the national board, announced that the first Pittsburgh application for a loan had been approved and that 10 of the 12 regional banks were ready to lend. The loan approved is the extension of a "line of credit." The borrower, an institution, will draw on its credit as needed.

Building and loan associations, savings banks and insurance companies are eligible for membership in the bank. They must, before receiving a loan, prepare a lengthy statement of their accounts, and this has held up action.

William E. Best, of Pittsburgh, director of the Federal Home Loan Bank, who has been in Washington working on the plan for the new banking system, will attend the meeting here, it is reported.

DRIVE FOR NEW BUS BACKERS

While awaiting the second act in the legal effort of the Pittsburgh Railways Company to prevent the Community Service Association from operating its buses on Pittsburgh streets—the filing of briefs by both sides—a mass meeting to seek adidtional members for the new association will be held tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the West View Junior High School.

The Community Service Association lost the first round of its struggle for right of operation when Judge James H. Gray refused to dismiss the preliminary injunction, ordering it continued pending the filing of briefs by both sides. In its plea for continuance of the writ the Pittsburgh Railways Company painted a picture of ruin in the event it was allowed bus competition.

With W. M. Justice as chairman, members of the Squirrel Bill Board of Trade began organization of a committee to affiliate with the organization.

Europe Has Now Stalled on All Excuses But Rain

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

European financiers have one hope left in the debt problem. We might take a rubber check.

They've tried every kind of postponement there is except rain.

The moratorium evaporates in two weeks and Europe is as unhappy as a squirrel in a dead oak. The future is as bright as red ink.

Payment means that America is going to take another bite at ear-marked gold. Accrued interest is coming home for the holidays. We have dunked our bread in the waters and it returneth in many days.

Our treasury is full now. But we want a couple of billion to use for window dressing. Tidy up the place a bit for Christmas.

Europe can borrow it again next year. We are always willing to do Europe a favor that only we can appreciate.

In the meantime, it is going to be lovely in Washington with Ogden Mills humming softly to himself.

WALSH POSTS DRIVER'S BOND

Marjorie Dublin, 32, of 5438 Butler street, was at liberty today on $1,000 bail posted by Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh for inquest into the death of Frank P. Michel, 4, of 184 Stanton Court, who died Sunday in St. Francis Hospital from injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile, according to the Coroner's office.

The boy and his sister, Clara, 8, were walking in Stanton avenue, near their home, when he was said to have ran in front of the car Saturday. The car overturned as the woman swerved it to avoid hitting the child. The child suffered two fractured hips, a fractured leg, fractured skull and concussion of the brain, deputy coroners said.

The Dublin woman appeared at the Coroner's office yesterday and was released on bond posted by Supt. Walsh. An inquest will be held at an early date.

Thrift Shop Praised After Survey By Official

Miss Dorothy Stebbins, field secretary of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, leaves tonight for Akron, O. Visiting here since Thursday, Miss Stebbins had inspected numerous institutions cooperating with the Pittsburgh Junior League, and consulted with the board about their social program.

Miss Stebbins, whose work is to combine Junior League and civic service activities, spoke favorably yesterday, of her impressions of the Pittsburgh group, although she had not completed her survey. She especially liked the Thrift Shop, 5427 Penn avenue, saying:

BANK DIVIDEND AT WASHINGTON

Depositors in the closed First Bank and Trust Company of Washington, Pa., on Thursday will receive their second dividend—a 10 per cent share totaling $416,557.83 for 14,888 depositors.

William D. Gordon, state secretary of banking, made this announcement today through Attorney Peter Glick, a deputy. The first payment of 15 per cent was made in August.

Gordon said this second payment would be deposited to the customers' accounts at the Washington Union Trust Company and can be had on presentation of identification notices.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 29.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Hey Rip: I got a "Believe It Or Not" for you. A fellow in Beverly Hills says the Literary Digest polls should be abolished on account of their accuracy. He don't mind a straw vote if it's not right. But he is "again" the true ones. He says people read 'em, and vote with the majority. But here is what he don't explain. What makes the majority in the straw vote?

Will Rogers

No, you are wrong. Chaplin didn't write that, or Laurel and Hardy, or Joe Brown. It was my friend the Republican editor of the Beverly Hills Citizen in a convincing editorial. It was his contribution to "what can the Republican party do to get their hands back in those U. S. mail sacks again?" Yours, WILL.

RECOVERY SEEN FOR DEFECTIVE VOTE DEVICES

Dismissal of Payment Appeal 'Believed to Leave Loophole

A State Supreme Court decision dismissing an appeal designed to restrain payment of $400,000 on Allegheny County's voting machines indicates the county need not be left "holding the bag" in the event the machines are defective, authoritative sources said today.

The court dismissed the appeal of Ada B. Bassett and other taxpayers who sought to restrain the old Board of County Commissioners from paying the $400,000 unpaid when the suit was filed. The money has been paid, however, as the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, the manufacturers, obtained a mandamus writ directing the payment, and the taxpayers did not fight it.

The court pointed out the Commissioners could not be restrained from making the payment already made, and orally during argument members of the court said the taxpayers should have taken an appeal when the mandamus writ was granted if they hoped to win their suit to restrain payment of the money.

The decision said, however, that the question of alteration and repair is not concluded by the mandamus and payment of the amount due on the machines, nor by the court's action in dismissing the taxpayers' appeal.

The contract provides for upkeep of the machines by the manufacturer for five years. The court's opinion said that if defects appear within the time limit specified and the city officials or surety does not take action, "doubtless the appellants can find appropriate remedy."

Observers interpreted this to mean the court leaves the way open to recover on the amount paid for the machines if they are not maintained during the five-year period.

PET DOG WARNS OF BLAZE

The continuous barking of Poozy, an Airedale, today led to discovery of a fire which damaged the home of James A. Taylor, vice president and treasurer of the Pennsylvania Trust Company, at 7410 Brighton road, Ben Avon.

Volunteer firemen of Ben Avon, Emsworth and Bellevue, wearing smoke masks, entered the home and subdued the flames after a two-hour fight. The attic and roof were destroyed and first and second floors damaged by water. The loss was not estimated.

Mrs. Taylor, her son, Richard, 24, and two daughters, Margaret, 22, and Kathryn, 18, who were roused from bed, fled the burning home. A defective flue was blamed.

CHAPTER XL

When I entered the business of collecting live exhibits it really amounted to commercializing a hobby. Invariably the man who enters the field starts with a natural love for animals.

No matter how long you have been in the game you find yourself singling out some appealing specimen for special attention. This is particularly true of the jungle's youngsters. There is always a wistful cub or fledgling for which you develop so real an affection that you find yourself wondering how you're going to be able to part with it when you're back in civilization; and the hard-boiled job of disposing of your collection begins.

You're in the realm of the intangible the minute you try to figure out exactly why you've grown fonder of one baby animal than another. It is as difficult as trying to determine why one child has more personal charm than another.

You suddenly discover that in the little creature to which you find yourself attracted there is a suggestion of a love of fun, of down-right roguishness perhaps—there is something of sparkle about the little cuss, a twinkle in the eyes that denotes a humorous outlook. You always feel about the object of your attachment that it would spend a good deal of its time laughing, if animals were addicted to that habit.

TRUE AFFECTION

All of which quite naturally reminds me of Mitzi, Mike and Oscar, infant representatives of the elephant, tiger and hornbill families, respectively. I developed as real an affection for this trio as for any animals I have ever handled.

Mitzi was the baby elephant—and quite a famous gal she became too that I brought back for those famous vaudevillians, Singer's Midgets. In the animal-collecting game one grows accustomed to strange assignments and there was nothing unusual about my receiving an order from Mr. Leo Singer for an elephant small enough to work with his midgets. This was about a dozen years ago, as I recall it.

I picked up Mitzi in a teak lumber camp north of Rangoon, near the Irriwadi River. Her mother was a "lumber elephant" and Mitzi was born right in the camp. A cute little girl with a nice little curl right in the middle of her forehead, she was just what was wanted. Even before she had a chance to grow up and join the ranks of Rangoon's younger generation of stage-struck elephants—the restless little pachyderms that thought life in a lumber camp was pretty dull—she was treading the path that leads to footlight fame.

MADE FRIENDS

It was quite a job hauling Mitzi by bullock cart 20 miles from the lumber camp to the nearest landing on the Irrawadi, where we could get a river boat for Rangoon. Every five miles or so (with the aid of Lal Behudar) I let her try her legs, letting her descend by means of an improvised gangplank that I brought with me.

Mitzi seemed to appreciate this and we quickly became good friends. She seemed to understand that in making those stops I always made a point of picking a spot where she could be sure of a few tasty mouthfuls of grass and leaves. She would rub her forehead against me by way of saying thanks, everything in her manner indicating that she thought the man who was blowing her to this series of picnic lunches was okay.

At Rangoon I booked passage to Calcutta on the well-known Rangoon Mail, Mitzi occupying choice quarters on the main passenger deck. She soon became a great favorite among the passengers—too much so for

Cling to Formulas Gained Through Experience

Special bulletins have been issued in Wisconsin to reduce baby crying, but Pittsburgh is going to stay old-fashioned and use the methods formed through years of experience, it was learned today.

The State Medical Society of Wisconsin in its bulletin to reduce baby crying says:

"Mothers should correct two habits formed by children—crying in order to get their own way and sulking until requests are granted."

"A baby's habits of regularity start when it is three hours old. Mothers should see that it is comfortable and cared for and then pay no attention to it. It is the only way to teach discipline."

Another hospital superintendent commented:

"These cartoons showing parents walking children is all wrong. They cry to be walked and when parents give them their own way it spoils them."

Sister De Paul, superintendent of Roselia Foundling Asylum, who has cared for thousands of babies, said:

"Bad temper and sullen behavior cost many people their places in the world of affairs despite their brilliance. You can always trace it back to crying babies who are given their own way."

A Pittsburgh doctor who heads several child clinics defended the babies who cry. He said:

"Three-month-old infants get most of their exercise by crying. Therefore they are entitled to a couple of 20-minute squawks a day. Youngsters are pretty foxy, so if they are picked up and pampered, don't blame the babies."

Versailles to Get Fire Plugs Installed

Installation of fire plugs in Versailles Township, through agreement yesterday with McKeesport Council, is expected to effect a 25 per cent reduction in fire insurance rates.

The township will pay the annual water rent of $85 for each plug and costs of installation.

CAMPAIGN HERE SHORT OF GOAL $460,000

Workers Stress Need Of Success to Aid County Destitute

Closing days of the Welfare Fund campaign for its $2,500,000 to see it through 1933 will be marked by an appeal for contributions from the 50,000 persons in Allegheny County who are estimated to be financially able to pledge their support to the fund but who have not yet done so.

The drive was short of its goal by some $460,000 today, with the end of the first week's extension of the campaign beyond its original limit of November 23 due tomorrow.

$119,336 PLEDGED

Eight thousand five hundred seventy new pledges for a total of $119,336 were turned in at yesterday's report luncheon. Speakers included Attorney Alexander Lindsay and A. M. Oppenheimer. Lindsay said:

"This county has the wealth to put this fund over the top. The attendance at football games is an index of the existence of this wealth. I am not criticizing anyone for spending money for amusement, but I do say that if people have that much money it is evidence that they also have enough wealth to take care of our starving population and to finance our vital social agencies. We must do this."

"Last year there were 125,000 contributors to the fund. This year, so far, we have had less than 40,000. Granting that many of those who gave last year are unable to do so now, there still remain some 50,000 to 60,000 who are not in the breadline category. Many of them can well afford to give $10, $20 or $50 a year. They are standing to one side, expecting 'George' to do it."

State Senator Frank J. Harris, another speaker at the meeting, remarked that:

"A special solicitation of the colored people of the Hill District under the Rev. R. D. Brown resulted in raising $512. The really poor people of the city are giving generously because they know the intensity of the need.

Injured Man Winning His 1,000-to-1 Chance

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Stephen Nandor, the man who a week ago had "one chance in a thousand" to live, is fighting a winning battle.

In an automobile accident November 11, Nandor suffered six three-inch fractures in his skull and his brain was dislodged.

The attending surgeon, Dr. C. E. Miksch, said today:

"The crisis may be said to have passed. In this particular case, every moment is a crisis, but we feel some optimism as a result of the fight he has shown."

Nandor, 28, a millworker, was greatly improved today. He joked with his nurses and put in a complaint about his "lean diet." Puffing a cigaret, he asked:

"Say, doc, isn't it possible for me to get a nice juicy steak smothered in mushrooms. A guy can't live on milk and toast forever, you know."

Nandor nevertheless must remain on his nursery menu until next week, although the doctors said today they are more hopeful than ever he will recover. They say he can get well without any other visible effects other than a slight nervous distortion of the right eye.

Fewer Deer Hunters Get Licenses Here

Fewer big game hunters than last year will take to the fields of Pennsylvania Thursday with the opening of deer season, Samuel F. Molinaro, Allegheny County's chief license clerk, predicts.

With just two days left before the season opens, applications are approximately 2,000 behind last year's. Records disclose 34,000 licenses have been issued so far.

The nimrods this season will not find it so easy to bag deer, for only bucks may be killed. There is no open season for antlerless deer this year, the State Game Commission announced.

'TIP' TOO LATE, HE TELLS IN RUM TRIAL

A brush with police during a raid on a liquor plant of which he said he was part owner was described by Rocco DiPippa, alias Roxie Long, today as he resumed his testimony in Federal Court in a liquor conspiracy trial before Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

DePippa testified he and Mike Damus owned a plant on Scotia street, Ingram, more than a year ago, when they were tipped off that the place was to be raided. Their employes started to empty mash out of vats while he, Di Pippa, stood watch, he said, but the police arrived before he could spread a warning. DiPippa said he fled in his automobile, but was stopped when a bullet punctured a tire. He escaped on foot and in a taxicab, he said.

DESCRIBES "RING"

He told of many ramifications of the alleged bootleg liquor ring and from time to time pointed out many of the 24 defendants standing trial as he brought their names into the testimony.

DiPippa, who with 16 others has pleaded guilty, implicated in his testimony a nephew and a brother-in-law, both of whom are defendants.

He identified Frank Mallinger and his son, Saul Mallinger, as the seller of bottles and whisky labels; J. G. Cancilla and Sam Perilman as makers of stills and said barrels were purchased from A. Kirshenbaum.

THOSE ON TRIAL

On trial are Patsy Meloragno, Mike Damus, Harry Kelly, brother-in-law of DiPippa; Arco Triano, Leo Huber, J. G. Cancilla, J. Diznoff, Caser Kelly, Patsy Cardone, Angelo Vernacchio, nephew of DiPippo; Harry Abbott, A. Shehab, Louis Magrino, James Totino, Edward Albert, Joe Totino, A. Kirshenbaum, Philip Yoritch; Morris Lustig, Frank Lustig, James P. Martorella, Joseph Kaplan, Saul Mallinger and Frank Mallinger.

The trials of Sam Malatovsky and Carmen Bosco were continued because of illness. Abe George was said to be a fugitive, and Philip Emille is to be brought to court from the penitentiary.

EXHIBIT SHOWS MANY SCENES OF DISTRICT

By PENELOPE REDD

The Junior League offers sanctuary in its galleries to a group of 26 Pittsburgh artists during the next fortnight. The exhibition is devoted to 130 of those fugitive pieces done by the painters and architects in interludes between their more serious projects. Black and white drawings, water color paintings, lithographs, drypoints and etchings, indicate the range of mediums.

James Anderson has a trilogy of quiet papers devoted to Pennsylvania landscape. E. M. Ashe sends two etchings of the Cumberland Gap genre, "The Last Hog" and "Up the "Trail" with the man of the family riding ahead gallantly while the women folks trudge behind. These plates have a dual appeal in their human implications and in their ingenious solution of design.

Miss Redd

Ernest Boyer's Boyer's landscapes in pencil are of jewel-like luminosity. Mrs. Louise Miller Boyer shows graphic portraits notably those of the late Dr. John Brashear, Mrs. Hogner, and Henry Harris.

Raymond Celli does a free, gay impression of "Old Port, Marseilles." Herbert C. Douden contributes sensitive etchings. P. R. L. Hogner does a vivid maiden, "Lupe" and a pleasing arrangement of birds in flight. Theodore Kohankie has a series of vigorous pencil sketches of famous spots. N. D. Kutchuckian's "Princeton place" with the architecturally distinguished and romantically rose-colored Hoeveler Street Bridge has pictorial quality.

CATHEDRAL PICTURE

Raymond Marlier's poetically conceived presentation of the Cathedral of Learning with the Brenner fountain in the foreground, and his wise choice of time in etching the Gulf Building, commend his prints to the spectator. Alfred M. Marks makes of the river boats individual vignettes of citizens of the city's landscape rarely noted. Rody Patterson's lithographs of local places also indicate an uncommon point of view convincingly stated. Milan Petrovits has a group of water color drawings of Hungarian peasant types drawn with gusto.

Samuel Rosenberg has a decorative study of a woman in green who greatly resembles Rowena Kostellow, a study of a rose almost precious in intensity, the head of a child delineated with high imagination, and two studies of Gloucester Harbor in the contemporary vernacular. Robert Schmertz does a water color looking from the Union Station towards the Fort Pitt Hotel, with Jovian detachment, and the sense of grandeur in scale that only architects command.

The best individual paper in the exhibition is Gerald Schoonover's "Silhouette of Pittsburgh." The utterly familiar view of the city from the Allegheny side is rendered with a quiet gray and mauve tonal beauty that is saved from sweetness by the authoritative drawing of the masses of the towering buildings.

MENJOUS HAPPY IN LOVE AGAIN

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29.—Adolphe Menjou loves his pretty blonde wife, Kathryn Carver Menjou, and she loves him. Well, that is enough, isn't it, to make two people say "I'm sorry. Let's forgive and forget."

Kathryn says she made many mistakes, and she is willing to admit it. Adolphe says three-quarters of the mistakes were his and he has never loved anyone but Kathryn and if she is willing to take him back he is returning to the blessed state of matrimony.

Is Kathryn willing? She is more than willing. She was so happy today she was fairly breathless when she told me that she had been seeing Adolphe every evening and they had decided to try to make a go of marriage again.

So that's that. And I know the whole Hollywood film colony is delighted that these two are together again.

Police Direct Thirsty To 'Club,' Judge Says

DIVORCE DENIED HUSBAND

Judge James H. Gray has handed down an opinion refusing a divorce to Herman Heymann, 56, of 6323 Darlington road, setting forth that he had not made out a case of desertion against his wife, Blanch Heymann, 325 Melwood street.

The latter was without counsel, when Judge Gray heard the case early in October, Mrs. Heymann appearing in the court room to oppose her husband's application.

Judge Gray in his opinion said it appears the couple cannot live together and that the respondent's disposition as evidenced in the court room made her very provoking to the libellant and that Heymann might have a cause of action on other grounds than desertion.

Heymann claimed that his wife left him, while Mrs. Heymann alleged that Heymann ordered her out.

The difficulty arose, testimony revealed, because of Mrs. Heymann's desire to keep roomers, which Heymann objected to. When times were good, Heymann said, he gave his wife $65 a week.

Only Constable Was Unaware of Oasis, Patterson Avers

Everyone knew of the existence of Oakland's fashionable drinking and gambling place but the constable of the Fourth Ward in which it is situated, Judge Patterson charged last night before the Agenda Club in the First United Presbyterian Community House, Union avenue, North Side.

Judge Patterson described minutely the de luxe club, he said held the court in contempt in its determination to operate. Its doors were opened to all but prohibition agents, the jurist charged.

Judge Patterson also said police from the Oakland station, across the street from the club, obligingly pointed out its location to newcomers.

He declared he was not a crusader, and said his challenge of constables in the "blind men's parade" was made because the officers were perjuring themselves. He indicated the constables would again be challenged in December.

Judge Patterson also assailed conditions in the Eleventh Ward, East Liberty, where, he said, many large speakeasies operate.

He told the North Siders of violations in their own area and cited resorts on Plush way, Anderson street, Cedar avenue and Lacock streets.

FUGITIVE TRIO SEIZED IN WEST

A Homewood girl and her two boy companions who, police said, beat, robbed and manacled a Kansas police chief, who was returning them here in a stolen automobile, were under arrest in Los Angeles today.

Edward Cavanaugh, alias Crawford; Bill Gunling, alias William Connors, and Mabel Crawford, alias Mabel Hurlston, 16, were traced to California by City Detectives George Brubach and James Swearingen, who began their search October 26 after Chief R. D. McGinnis, of Newton, Kan., had been beaten as he drove across the Pennsylvania border line from Ohio. The girl and her companions escaped in the stolen car.

Word of their arrest in Los Angeles came to detectives yesterday. Plans were being made to return them here.

The automobile in which the three were arrested in Kansas had been stolen from J. S. Johnson, of the Schenley Arms Apartments, October 6.

Bandits Bind 2, Loot Bank as Vault Opens

NORTH BROOKFIELD, Mass., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Thieves trussed up a janitor and a bank cashier today and then sat inside the North Brookfield Savings Bank until a timing device opened the safe at 9 o'clock. The three thieves then took $1,200 from the safe and fled in the cashier's automobile.

They were captured two hours later at Stafford Springs, Conn., according to state police.

Alligator Spills Hunter From Canoe

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(Universal.)—Borough President Harvey, of Queens, now vacationing at St. Simon's Island, Ga., was dumped out of a canoe while hunting by an alligator, it was revealed today.

While wading to shore, the alligator pursued Harvey, and Al Benning, Queens park commissioner, who also was hunting for alligators, shot the animal.

her own good. The more people like an animal the more harm—unconsciously—they do it.

Their one idea seems to be to see how many cakes, cookies and other sweets they can feed it. This is hardly the right diet for a baby elephant. My main problem was to discourage the well-meaning passengers who were trying to ruin the digestion of the little girl from the Irrawadi.

WATCHED CLOSELY

When we arrived at our destination I walked Mitzi from Ootram Ghat, Calcutta's principal passenger dock on the Hooghly river, across the half-mile of midan or parkway that separates this dock from the Grand Hotel where I always stay when in this part of the world. Pending other arrangements I tied Mitzi to one of the trees in front of the hotel, where I could keep an eye on her. She was a valuable specimen, this child of the lumber camps, and I was taking no chances with her.

Already she was displaying remarkable intelligence, responding whenever her name was called and showing all the earmarks of a potential first-rate performer.

At the time I was storing a number of animals and birds at a trader's place in Parsee Church street, but I didn't want to take Mitzi there as I felt she called for special attention. My plan was to arrange for stable accommodations near the hotel. Failing to get what I wanted the first day, I decided to see what I could do on the morrow, in the meantime assigning Lal to watching—and living with—the little pachyderm.

One of the great things about Hindu helpers is that you don't have to worry about accommodations for them. Lal, for instance, was always ready with his bedding roll, to take up his watch in an open field, the deck of a ship, anywhere.

Lal was soon on duty beside Mitzi, prepared to spend the night seeing that all went well with the lumber-camp graduate. The following morning, before I had a chance to locate the stable accommodations I wanted Mitzi to have, I was called to Budge-Budge on important business. Lal's orders were to devote himself exclusively to ministering to Mitzi

ENGLISHMAN ANGERED

Further instructions were to the effect that guests of the Grand Hotel, with whom Mitzi had quickly established herself as a favorite, were not to be allowed to feed her

Only the day before a well-meaning old fool had tried to feed the little elephant the conventional sweet cookies offered by animal fans, and when, as Mitzi's representative, I refused the tender, the old boy—an Englishman, who said he knew a gentleman when he saw one and didn't mind saying I didn't at all resemble the species—stomped off, adding something about letting the hotel management know what sort I was.

Lal was warned to deal politely but firmly with all such. If the good-hearted but trouble-making amateurs who feed animals all kinds of rubbish only knew how many specimens they've killed off in their time, they might change their tactics.

Lal vowed to look after Mitzi in the typical Lal manner. The boy kept his promise, but he didn't get the breaks. The morning after my departure (I was due to be gone two days) the assistant who relieved him while he performed his morning ablutions, an important religious ceremony, made the mistake of trying to be useful during Lal's absence.

This substitute guardian of Mr. Singer's future star noticed that the rope by means of which Mitzi was tied to a tree had managed to become considerably kinked and twisted. Pursuing his foolish desire to be of service instead of squatting on his haunches and letting well enough alone, he untied the little pachyderm and started unkinking the rope.

CONFESSED SLAYER

CHARLES ARNWINE, 25 DETECTIVE ANTHONY RUSSO

Suspect Arnwine at Newtown, Pa., shortly after he confessed that he had fired the shot that killed 15-year-old Frances Rempfer, whose body was found in a woods days after she vanished. It was a suicide pact, police say he explained, and he had "lost his nerve." This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

ATTACK SUICIDE PACT STORY

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Silent and seemingly impassive, Charles Arnwine rested in "murderer's row" in the Bucks County Prison here today, charged with the murder of pretty 15-year-old Frances Rempfer, of Newtown, which police say he confessed.

Arnwine, twice married and estranged from his second wife, was held yesterday without bail.

It is believed that today authorities will attempt to prove false the claim of Arnwine, that the girl willingly lifted her lips to his as he pressed the muzzle of a .32 caliber revolver against her breast and fired the bullet that put a tragic end to their ill-starred romance. So far, Arnwine has remained insistent that the young girl went to her death willingly ina love-pact. This authorities believe, is untrue. Arnwine said he lost his nerve when it came to taking his own life in completion of the alleged pact.

The girl's body was found late Saturday, crumpled under an old mattress on a dump heap in Double Woods, a few miles from her home in Newtown. She had been missing for two weeks. Arnwine was lodged in jail Thursday—two days before the slain girl was found — on complaint of Charles Rempfer, her father.

Loughran secretary of the committee in charge of the entertainment.

KERR PROPOSES COUNCIL FIRE DOCKMASTER

The report of Controller James P. Kerr on the city-owned docks along the Allegheny River, now up for action in City Council's Finance Committee, may cost S. A. Michalski his job as city dockmaster.

The report, submitted yesterday to Council, says the job of "dockmaster" should be eliminated and the waterfront between Seventh and Ninth street bridges be leased to a private firm or individual.

Controller Kerr's report came as the result of recent charges made by John Douglas, Jr., sand and gravel contractor.

It acts in seven minutes. Relief is complete. The pain is gone. Midol is not a narcotic and offers no interference with nature. All druggists; ask simply for Midol.

'Greek Gods' Don Bathrobes, Upset Co-ed Hockeyists

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The "Greek gods" are back on the Olympian heights today after a quick descent to demonstrate their superiority over co-ed hockey stars.

Making good on a challenge, Swarthmore football and soccer players, calling themselves "Greek gods" and attired in bathrobes and other variations of "Grecian" costumes, defeated the women's varsity hockeyists, 1 to 0.

MRS. ROOSEVELT IN RADIO PLEA

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(Universal.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President-elect, sounded earnest appeals last night in behalf of the unemployed women and girls of the country.

Mrs. Roosevelt urged all to support the league, the Y. W. C. A. and kindred organizations striving to aid unemployed women, not only with all the money they could give, but also "a little of yourselves."

Mrs. Roosevelt also broadcast an appeal for support of the National Tuberculosis Association through the use of Christmas Seals.

2 HURT AT FIRE ON NORTH SIDE

A woman and a fireman were injured in a blaze at 406-408 Federal street that caused damage estimated at $1,000 and delayed traffic last night.

The flames apparently started in a second-floor bathroom at 408 Federal street, the first floor of which is occupied by the Chessman Optical Company. Fire spread through the walls of that building and 406 Federal street, occupied by the Peter Wolf Shoe Company. Wolf is a brother of Morris Wolf, whose store at 1707 Center avenue, was burned yesterday.

Mrs. Nellie Chessman, living on the third floor of the Chessman building, was bruised when she fell downstairs as she ran to safety. Hoseman Samuel Leisifer, 27, of 405 Armandale street, fell through the skylight of an adjoining building while stretching a hose line.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasant results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

"—my skin became clear..."

—and you don't know what a happy day that was in my life." Then why not pause a moment and reason in a common-sense way the cause of many skin troubles. Such common ailments often result because of a lowered resistance below the skin surface—frequently due to lowered blood vitality.

Increase the red-blood-cells and their hemoglobin content and more of the life giving oxygen is carried to every part of the body—even to the skin. "Step up" the ability of the resisting cells to devour infectious pimple germs. Then you will have laid the foundation for a sounder physical condition.

S.S.S., in addition to being a valuable general tonic, has the special property of increasing the red-cells and restoring the hemoglobin content of the blood, when deficient. It is time-tested...tens of thousands of unsolicited letters of gratitude over several generations evidence its merit. Don't let anyone "switch" you in your determination to restore your red-blood-cells and their hemoglobin content. SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Pitt Team Lauds Corbus. | Pitching Wins Pennants.

GREATEST GUARD PANTHERS EVER SAW

THE FEATURE OF the Stanford game that is still being discussed more than any other among the Pitt players is the brilliant exhibition of guard play given by Bill Corbus, of the Indians. The Panthers declare they never saw anything to equal it. They do not stop at pronouncing him the best guard that appeared at the Stadium this year, but rank him as the best they encountered anywhere, and then they take in a wider field in the matter of positions and term him the greatest lineman they saw all season. Some of the older players say Corbus was the finest guard they saw in any season while playing for Pitt.

Bill Corbus

Corbus was not only powerful and fast, but exceptionally smart. The Panthers say they changed their system several times to keep the Coast star out of their backfield, but that Corbus quickly solved the new arrangement and resumed smashing Panther plays. To show how fast he was, the Sutherlands recall that more than once he broke through the Pitt line and got Warren Heller from behind. Maybe there's another guard in the country that could do that, but the Blue and Gold boys doubt it. They consider Corbus and Tackle Henri La Borde a pair of linesmen not to be outdone anywhere. As for Corbus in particular, they believe he has no superior and they had not seen his equal.

AMONG THE UNUSUAL selections of major college football captains for next year is that of Art Lane at Princeton, inasmuch as he played in only one game during 1932 and that at the start of the season. For that reason his election has caused some comment in the East, Bob Dunbar reports.

It is explained, however, that Lane was fully entitled to the captaincy. He was a regular tackle a year ago, as a sophomore, the only one of his class to win a position. He was an outstanding tackle, too, and it was only because of an injury that he did not play this fall.

A BREAK HAS occurred in the team that Jock Sutherland is lining up for the North-South game in Baltimore. Though Sam Fishman, brilliant Dartmouth back, accepted an invitation and received permission from the Dartmouth authorities to play, he will not be among the gridders participating.

It seems that when Fishman was selected to play for the North, the invitation was extended in the belief that he was a senior. When it was found that he was only a junior, however, Sutherland withdrew the invitation rather than cause the player any embarrassment.

ONE RECORD THAT Army's team took out with it when the Soldiers closed their season last Saturday was that of having played to both the largest and the smallest paid admission gates of the year in the East, if not in the entire country. The Notre Dame game last Saturday at the Yankee Stadium in New York set the season's high, with an attendance of 80,000 and receipts in excess of $300,000. The other extreme was reached one week earlier at Army's game with West Virginia Wesleyan in Michie Stadium at West Point, for which the total number of admission tickets sold was exactly 58, at the flat price of $1 per ticket, plus 10 cents Federal tax.

Connie Mack

WITH ALL DUE respect to the terrific hitting power of the Yankees and the part it played in putting them on top of the baseball world last season, you can take it from Connie Mack that the main factor in their success was good pitching.

Mack so declared in expressing the belief that his A's will beat out the Yanks next year. "We'll do it with pitching," he said. "I am confident I'll have a far better staff than this year. I know that Grove, Earnshaw, Walberg and Mahaffey will get better results in 1933, and they will be aided by Freitas, Cain, Claset and Peterson.

"PITCHING WINS OR loses a pennant," Connie continued. "The Yankees played great ball last season because they had first-class pitching. You can put a fair ball club behind great pitching and it becomes a winner. But no matter how good a team you put behind poor pitching you must have a loser.

"There is no truth in the story that I intend to trade or sell Earnshaw. Of course, he will have to realize that conditions have changed, that we cannot stand the heavy overhead we had this year, and that he will have to pitch for less money next season. But I feel that he will do his level best."

THERE CAN BE no doubt of the impression that Notre Dame opposition made on Orv Mohler, for when asked to name the best players he met while playing quarterback for Southern California he awarded no fewer than six of the eleven positions to Irish stars. Mohler listed the following: Ends, Host, Notre Dame, and Stone, California; tackles, Kurth, Notre Dame, and Edwards, Washington State; guards, Corbus, Stanford, and Seafide, Tulane; center, Yarr, Notre Dame; quarterback, Carideo, Notre Dame; halfbacks, Schwartz, Notre Dame, and Moffat, Stanford; fullback, O'Connor, Notre Dame. Moffat was the last Stanford player to score on Southern California and the only Indian to cross the Trojan goal line since 1927. He made both of Stanford's touchdowns in the game in 1930.

PUG RENTNER and several of the other outstanding Northwestern stars of recent years are not given places on an all-time all-star team selected by a former football man of prominence at that university, who picked the eleven recently for the Northwestern Alumni News.

"A READER" WRITES to ask the seating capacity of Forbes Field, and whether Pitt could have declined the penalty, if, in one of those two plays inside the one-yard line on which Ohio State was offside, the Panthers had carried the ball over the goal line.

Les Patrick

The seating capacity of Forbes Field is now 32,937. Pitt could have declined the penalty and would have been credited with a touchdown. All penalties may be declined except disqualification and several in connection with forward passes.

WHEN THEY MEET the Bruins in Boston tonight the New York Rangers, last season's champions of the American Group in the National Hockey League, will be trying to keep up a scoring record that is unique in the upper division of the ice sport. The Rangers may not repeat their first place victory of a year ago, in fact they are now occupying the cellar with only five points to their credit, but at least they can claim the distinction of being the most consistent scorers in the circuit. In a stretch of 58 consecutive games, running through three seasons, Manager Les Patrick's skaters never have been blanked. Starting in the 1930-31 campaign, continuing through last season and taking in the first four contests played this fall, the Rangers have not failed in any engagement to score at least one goal.

GENE SARAZEN, HAGEN HEAD REBELLION

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(Universal.)—Led by Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen, 20 of the country's foremost professional players last night seceded from the Professional Golfers' Association and organized a union of their own.

The rebellion, which may result in the slow disintegration of the P. G. A., was enacted quietly. Virtually without oral gunfire at a meeting held secretly in the Miami-Biltmore Hotel at Coral Gables, Fla., after the second round of the $10,000 open tournament there had been concluded.

Universal Service was appraised of the sudden turn of events via long distance telephone.

Among those who thought the time ripe for a severance of relations with the P. G. A beside Sarazen and Hagen were Wiffy Cox, Billy Burke, Joe Turnesa, Henry Ciuci, Ed Dudley, Al Watrous, Al Espinosa, Joe Kirkwood, Paul Runyan, Walter Kozak, Craig Wood, Johnny Farrell, Denny Shute and Johnny Golden.

POWERS TOURNEY CHIEF

RIDGEWOOD, N. J., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—George R. Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers' Association, today announced the appointment of Francis Powers, Chicago newspaperman, as manager of the P. G. A.'s tournament bureau.

Powers has an office in the First National Bank Building, in Chicago.

HANLEY PICKS PLAYERS

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Coach Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, who will be associated with Coach Andy Kerr, of Colgate, in the preparation of the eastern team in the annual East-West Shrine Hospital charity game at San Francisco, January 2, has announced the names of 12 players who will receive invitations.

Harry Newman, of Michigan, is Hanley's choice for quarterback. The others and their prospective squad positions are: Ends, Paul Moss, Purdue, and Dick Fencl, Northwestern; tackles, Joe Kurth, Notre Dame, and Marshall Wells, Minnesota; guards, Jim Harris, Notre Dame; Dick Smith, Ohio State, and Bob Gonya, Northwestern; center, John Oehler, Purdue; halfbacks, Ernest Rentner, Northwestern, and Gil Berry, Illinois; fullback, Roy Horstmann, Purdue.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE OLDEST SCHOOL TEACHER—In June, 1932, Miss Marada F. Adams, of Portland, Me., completed her sixty-ninth year of teaching—establishing a record for the United States which has been unchallenged. Ever since Miss Adams first started school at the age of 4, she has spent every school day of the year in the class room, with the exception of a one-week vacation many years ago. She never has been late or absent. Miss Adams now is principal of the Emerson Grammar School in Portland, which post she has held for the past 34 years, without a single day's absence.

SAMPLE HOPES TO LEAD TEAM TO VICTORY

By JESS CARVER

William Egbert Sample, co-captain of Carnegie Tech's football team, which blows the fast expiring 1932 campaign an airy kiss of farewell Saturday by meeting Georgetown in Washington, D. C., hopes to put his nickname to the Hilltoppers, as the Georgetowns have been quaintly tagged by someone or other.

Hooks Sample

This has not been a very fat year for Hooksie. He's a great football player, no mistake, when he's right, but he hasn't been right this fall. He had to be held out of the big game with Notre Dame, due to the recurrence of an old leg injury, which "recurred" in the game with Western Reserve in Cleveland. Hooksie's bulk in that game in South Bend might have changed the complexion of things somewhat, just as the presence in the lineup of Bill Corbus here Saturday for Stanford against Pitt stood between the Indians and a darn good trimmin'.

STARRED AGAINST PITT

Willie Egbert never really struck his stride until the Pitt game, but he put in a great afternoon against the Panthers and repeated with a fine exhibition against New York U. The fact his team lost both those games was no reflection on Willie's work.

The game against Georgetown (if you don't care to call 'em Hilltoppers, call 'em Hoyas) will mark the completion of Sample's varsity career, along with those of the other co-leader, George Kavel, and Red Jones, Jack Croissant, Harry McCurdy, Tom Coulter, Tony Kebe and Jerry Seigel.

The Tartans worked out at some length yesterday and will hold a more strenuous session today, with another scheduled for tomorrow. Tech's squad will probably depart; no, probably will depart (my, how easily those infinitives split this season) for Washington Thursday night.

Saturday's ball game hardly figures to pack away any 70,000 or 80,000 customers, and there won't be a whale of a lot at stake, except that both teams need a victory to bolster up comparatively drab records, but if the contest is anywhere near as interesting and bitterly fought as the last meeting on the gridiron between the schools, it will be a honey.

Back in the days when we still didn't care whether Steel jumped 10 or 15 points a day, Tech and Georgetown met in Albany, N. Y. That was in 1928. The Techs had finished off Pitt, 6-0, and Georgetown had taken New York University's great eleven, 7 to 2, the week previous. Both were undefeated and the Eastern championship, for the time at least, hinged on the outcome of the contest.

HARPSTER KNOCKED OUT

The lads went to it hammer and tongs, to say nothing of leather-bandaged mitts, cleats and short pokes to the midriff in the safety of the middle of the line, and Tech came out on top, 13 to 0. In that game, for the first and only time, I saw Howard Harpster knocked out. Harpster tried a poke through the center of the Georgetown line, which was guarded by one Sam Cordovano, and what do you think happened? Harp ran square into a bunch of fives . . . closed. Tch, tch, tch . . . there was the great Harpster, out like an oyster in July.

He recovered and piloted his team to a victory, but that night, coming back on the choo-choo, he rubbed his jaw so often in a bridge game that Cy Letzelter accused him of signaling to his partner, John Karcis. Cy was plenty wrong, for no one ever had to signal Karcis in a bridge battle. In bridge, it always was "signals off" with Johnny.

HASKELL HEAD RELEASED

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—F. W. McDonald, during whose 13 years as athletic director at Haskell Institute gained nationwide recognition in sports, was released by the athletic board last night.

The board's statement pointed to necessity for curtailment of athletics due to a reduction of anticipated revenues as the reason for not renewing McDonald's contract, but McDonald asserted he was discharged because of his political activity.

Rochester Drops Buffalo as 'Pros'

BUFFALO, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Coach Jimmy Wilson, of the University of Buffalo football team, withheld direct comment today on the cancellation by Dr. Edwin Fauver, of the University of Rochester, of the Rochester-Buffalo football game in 1933.

The cancellation followed charges of professionalism among University of Buffalo football players.

Action was precipitated by an advertisement Coach Wilson had authorized urging Buffalo businessmen to provide jobs for football players so that they could attend the University of Buffalo.

Gailus, Gillman O. S. U. Co-Captains

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Joe Gailus, of Vandergriff, Pa., and Sidney Gillman, of Minneapolis, Minn., last night were chosen co-captains of the 1933 Ohio State University football team. It was the first time in the school's athletic history joint football leaders were named.

SCHOOL COACH WITH SEALS

Ambridge High School boasts the only undisputed champion in the W. P. I. A. L. for the football season just closed, and tomorrow night Moe Rubenstein, its coach, will tell the fans how his team came through the season undefeated to win its laurels, appearing as a guest speaker with the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE.

Others participating in the program, at 7 o'clock, are Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph; Herb McGee, announcer, and Miss Marian Salmon, pianist.

Fight Results

At Holland, Mass.—Don (Red) Barry defeated Arthur Huttick, 10 rounds; Joe Kaminski knocked out Frank Biagnasso, 2 rounds; Ruby Bradley defeated Pete De Agata, 6 rounds.

PITT IN OPENER

The Pitt varsity basketball team will open its season in Akron Saturday evening against the Goodyears in a preseason game. The Dukes open their season Monday night, December 29, while the Skibos clash with West Virginia on January 7.

SPORT VIGNETTES

It is a paradox of football, most rugged of sports, that serious injuries seldom occur in hard games . . . The hurts pile up in the so-called "easy" games, when the star players are not keyed up and tensed for action . . . This was true in the case of Pitt and its most difficult of schedules this fall . . . The only serious casualty was Capt. Paul Reider, and he injured his right leg in the opening game with Ohio Northern, which the Panthers won, 47-0 . . . He never got fully over this injury, which consisted of badly pulled muscles, and was of little value to the team thereafter in what was expected to be his greatest season . . . He was able to get back for a starting assignment in the next to last game, with Carnegie Tech, and then was carried from the field with his left leg injured and sat out the final game, with Stanford, high up in the press box at the rim of the Stadium.

Paul Reider

Reports have it that while he was here last week Pop Warner told friends he was planning to retire from coaching and that this was his last season at Stanford . . . This is to be doubted . . . Warner told this writer he thought it was a shame that Old Man Amos Alonzo Stagg was being let out as coach at Chicago because of the age limit there, saying the departure from his routine of more than 40 years might prove a tragedy to that veteran, who is older and has been in harness longer than Pop himself.

Mose Butch, local southpaw bantamweight boxer, is sold on the idea of turning himself around in his next bout and boxing from an orthodox stance . . . He has been trying out the plan in his gym workouts and finds he can fight as well with his left foot and hand extended as the other way . . . It is difficult for a lefthander to obtain bouts, and Mose hopes to increase the demand for his services by making the switch . . . Matt Adgie, former heavyweight boxer, is the new matchmaker of the Olympia arena in Philadelphia . . . Tailor-made suits will be given winners and sport sweaters will go to the runners-up in an amateur boxing tournament to be staged in Philadelphia.

The Army-Navy football game will be played in Philadelphia Saturday for the first time in 10 years, and the almost 80,000 capacity of the stadium already is sold out at $4.40 per ticket, regardless of location . . . Philadelphia really is the home of this colorful series, which was inaugurated in 1890, with the first games alternating between West Point and Annapolis . . . In 1899, after a lapse of five years between games, the battles were revived by the late Dr. J. William White, a Philadelphia physician, who had been the sponsor of the original series.

The '99 game was played at Franklin Field, then seating only 20,000 persons, and was fought out before many empty seats . . . Gradually the general public took up the game and within five years the demand for tickets was twice the capacity of Franklin Field . . . With the exception of the 1905 game, at Princeton, all of the

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Pittsburgh, Cornell, Army and Pennsylvania share top honors, each contributing two men to the mythical all-Eastern football team picked annually for the Associated Press today by sports writers.

One representative each from Columbia, Fordham and Colgate, the latter the sole undefeated, unscored upon team in the section, round out the first team.

As it was King, rated almost unanimously by the experts as the greatest end in the country up to the time of his injury, trailed just far enough behind Joe Skaldany, Pitt's burly wingman, and Jose Martinez-Zorrilla, of Cornell, to slip to the second team along with Tony Matal, of Columbia.

At quarterback the scribes placed Cliff Montgomery, the limber-hipped Columbia ball carrier, a splendid passer, kicker, field general, along with his ability as a broken-field runner.

The Tipoff

Chewing over a bit of roast beef last evening, W. Don Harrison, Pitt's director of athletics, said the Panthers would not be considering any post-season football save the game in the Rose Bowl. Harrison said the Panthers had been approached by Texas Christian regarding a game in Fort Worth Christmas Day, but that there would be nothing doing.

The director, over the breast of pheasant and the bird's nest salad, said it was possible that a Southern eleven would be booked to fill the open date remaining on the 1933 card. The University of Virginia was considered, but the Old Dominion school wanted too hefty a guarantee.

You may look for the Eastern bid for the Rose Bowl game to come popping along about next Sunday. The Trojans will be formally notified that they are to represent the West tonight, and they'll hold off inviting their opponent until after the Big Ten meeting Saturday. If the Western Conference gives Michigan the dare (Pennsylvania Dutch for permission) to go, the Wolverines figure to get the call, but a little birdie whispered to me that as far as Fielding Yost is at Michigan, the rule against post-season games will stand—especially as far as Michigan is concerned.

And in closing, this department promises that the first time opportunity and space permits, to let the public in on Frank (Tiger) Walton's correct name. The Beaver Falls Italian has a name that should be tacked on a poet. At that, the Tiger was poetry of motion itself a couple times last Saturday as he cracked down those Stanford ball-toters.

NEW RULES NEEDED TO CLEAR UP W. P. I. A. L. MUDDLE

PROTESTS RUIN CHANCES FOR REAL CHAMPS

"THE SONG OF THE COACH"
Tune, "Spring Song."

Protest! Protest! is the coach's friend;
Protest! Protest! is the coach's friend;
If it wasn't for the protests all games would stand as played,
File a little protest—have your losses thrown away.

By JULIUS LEVIN

When the football committee of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League was forced to go off the point system as a result of protest upheld by the decisions' board of the same group it proved beyond all question of a doubt the fallacy of the method now used in determining scholastic gridiron champions.

Football games are won and lost on the gridiron, not in conference rooms, and the sooner the W. P. I. A. L. powers-that-be realize this fact, the better it will be for scholastic athletics in Western Pennsylvania.

NEW RULES NEEDED

The inconsistency of the football committee in selecting worthy champions in all of its groups this season bears out the contention of high school authorities that there is considerable room for improvement in legislation that governs the activities of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League.

When one method is employed to determine champions one year only to have it tossed into discard in another it proves beyond question that new systems should be adopted.

None can question the integrity of John G. Hulton, of Latrobe; Ralph Gardner, of New Castle, and J. C. Dunn, of McDonald, who comprise the football committee of the W. P. I. A. L., but unless these men are given a revised set of rules by which to work, Western Pennsylvania will continue to be represented by "synthetic" champions.

Last season the committee used the Gardner point system to determine its football champions in class A and class B. This season it was announced officially that the point system would determine the titleholders in the same groups, while victories and defeats would govern the class AA race.

SYSTEM CAST ASIDE

Despite this agreement, the point system was cast aside and joint champions were selected in all divisions with the exception of class A, in which Ambridge ruled without a competitor.

The fact that the point system proved itself worthless in determining the class B championship should have been sufficient reason to cast this method into discard, but this was far from the action taken by the committee, as later events proved.

Not convinced that the point system was worthless in its present form, the committee even went so far as to suggest that the class AA group next season be governed by this method of procedure.

Two rules should be adopted and strictly enforced before another football campaign rolls around. They are needed and should be passed without delay. They are:

1—All schools violating any league rules should be suspended for a period of one year. All members of the league should be restrained from meeting the guilty school in any branch of sport during the period of suspension.

2—Schools having grounds on which to file a protest should present them to the decisions committee before contests are played. Any school presenting a protest after a game has been played should be ignored by the decisions committee.

NO PUNISHMENT

As things stand at present there is no punishment for teams violating the rules of the league, at least the committee has failed to take any action against New Kensington, a school which caused the muddle in this year's races by using an ineligible player. Instead of reprimanding the Valley authorities for infraction of the rules, the committee selected Carl Glock, coach at New Kensington, as a member of the committee on eligibility in the class AA group.

Tunney's Own Story of Thrilling Life To Be Published by the Sun-Telegraph

Beginning next Monday in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion of the world, will reveal the innermost secrets of a career that brought him from Greenwich Village and a $5-a-week office boy job to the luxuries of a millionaire in a Park avenue palace.

Titled "A Man Must Fight," it is one of the most remarkable, colorful, thrilling, absorbing narratives of a human life and ambitions fulfilled that ever has been written. From the "Old Swimmin' Hole" in the Hudson River to battle-torn France, and then back to America and the battles of the prize ring, it carries the reader through a series of exploits never dreamed of even by a Horatio Alger. It is the simple, direct, true story of a pair of fighting fists, but in the graphic narration of their wonderful accomplishments it becomes an epic.

"When my story is told, I'll tell it myself. And I will write it myself. It may not be great literature, but it will be the truth."

Thus for four years spoke Gene Tunney to editors who besought him for the story of his rise after he had won, defended and then cast aside the championship of the world. Here is that story. All of it.

Before you have finished this series you will have the story of a youngster's persistence winning over physical disadvantage, of neighborhood bouts that led to the championship of the A. E. F. in France. You will have the story of the losing, bloody battle with Harry Greb, of Pittsburgh, and later the conquest of that most remarkable fighter; of the defeat of Georges Carpentier, Tom Gibbons, Battling Levinsky and a host of others that led to the great goal of Tunney's ambition—a fight for the world title.

You will be told how the terrible Dempsey was beaten in Philadelphia, the tale of the famous long count in Chicago.

It is a thrilling story of the punch and politics of prize fighting, written by the man who did the fighting.

'Now It Can Be Told'

How Gibby Held Up Pirates for Part Of His Purchase Price—And Got It

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Baseball stars are paid princely salaries now as compared with their wages of 25 years ago, but human nature was the same then as it has been since David outguessed Goliath with that original "bean ball."

George Gibson, Pirate pilot, was sold to Pittsburgh by Montreal in May of 1905. A raw country boy from the farm, Gibby's contract with Montreal called for $200 per month.

After some friend had reported young Gibson as a nugget in the rough, Barney Dreyfuss dispatched Catcher Harry Smith to Buffalo to look at the young receiver. Gibby didn't know what it was all about, in a manner speaking, but Smith watched him receive and wired Dreyfuss to nab the youth.

YES, CANDY HAD ONE

At this point the plot thickens. The villain enters the scene. No "ten-twenty-thirty" bad man had a moustache to match the upper lip which scared diamond stars when Candy LaChance strutted around first base. If you met La Chance in a dark alley your first thought would be a wish to call out the U. S. Marines.

Candy was so tough he made "nice boys" like Fred Clarke, Pat Tebeau and John McGraw believe they were daredevils of the college glee club. The veteran had slipped back from the big tent to the sideshow of baseball, but he still gloried in his early triumphs as he caught for Montreal. As our hero was taking his exit to greener fields, Candy hissed:

"Don't let those city slickers take you, kid. They put out at least $2,000 for you. Now, if they refuse to kick in with 25 per cent of the purchase money, hop a freight and leave them flat."

The villainous words rang in George's ears as he reached Pittsburgh and the Farmers Bank Building, wherein were the offices of the Pittsburgh club. Reminiscing, Gibby relates:

"Candy's words were ready to break out as I reached the Pirate office. I had told the Montreal boys that I positively would be back if I did not collect $500 of the purchase money. Besides, I had my mind set on a boost of 100 per cent in pay.

"Well, Mr. Dreyfuss knocked me off my pins when he said I was worth $400 per month or nothing. After my breath came back I played my ace card for the 500 berries. This play broke up the game."

Dreyfuss informed his Montreal caller, in a somewhat polite manner, that he was barking up the wrong tree in attempting to collect a part of the purchase price from the Pittsburgh end, inasmuch as Montreal had received the cash. That seemed quite fair, thought Gibby. He relates:

A HAPPY ENDING

"One of the Montreal owners was in Pittsburgh and I pulled a fast one. I got the Montreal gent into Barney's office and tossed Candy's ultimatum at the two of them. I guess I was a bit fresh as I told them to get together on the big idea. Then I bowed out, but soon I was asked to return. When I arrived again, a check for the $500 awaited me. I didn't know anybody in Pittsburgh and would have felt better if they had handed me the cash, but at this point a good-lucking bird stepped into the office. Dreyfuss looked up and addressed the newcomer:

"'Take this dude down to the bank, Deacon, and tell the cashier the check is o. k.'

"And Deacon Phillippe helped me to change that check into Candy LaChance's original demand note."

ROONEYS BOOK CONTEST WITH PEN TEAM

By TOM BIRKS

The present week-end will see sandlot football activities for 1932 hereabouts brought to a close. The J. P. Rooneys, thrice West Penn Conference champions, will call it a season on Thursday, when Manager Art Rooney takes his Big Green machine to Bellefonte to clash with the Penitentiary team.

Each season, one or two of the outstanding district teams make the trip. The Olympics, of McKeesport, already have clashed with the pen gridiron warriors.

Saturday, the Scott Morgans, of Homewood, will meet an all-star team selected by Jimmy Rooney, with the proceeds going to charity. The game will be played at Greenlee Field, and will get under way at 2:30.

On Sunday, Rox Rangers, for the second year Section I titilists in the Lightweight Conference, will meet the Broadway Mounts, winner of Section II crown, in the playoff game.

Benswanger Denies Meine on Block

President William E. Benswanger, of the Pirates, last night denied that the Buccos were seeking to trade Pitcher Heinie Meine to the Brooklyn Dodgers. Benswanger and Max Carey, manager of the Dodgers, were together for a short time Sunday, but did not discuss baseball. Carey came here to serve as a pallbearer at the funeral services of William Lincoln Stewart.

Benswanger said that there was nothing to the report; that if the locals had wished to get rid of Meine the matter would have been attended to last year when Heinie was holding out.

Lew Massey Loses To Eddie Cool

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—A flashy exhibition of boxing and the ability to keep out of range gave Eddie Cool, Philadelphia lightweight, a 10-round decision last night over Lew Massey, of Philadelphia, in the feature bout of a boxing show.

Cool, a lithe 133-pounder, worked a left jab, crossed with a chopping right, to keep his 135-pound opponent at a distance.

COACH TELLS OF GRID COMEDY, TRAGEDY

'FREAK' PLAYS IN FOOTBALL AMAZING

By W. A. (BILL) ALEXANDER
Georgia Tech Coach.
(Member All-America Board of Football.)

When football coaches gather to talk shop, conversation usually turns to the strange plays and freak happenings of the game, rather than involved problems of theoretical play. Bob Ripley could keep his "Believe It Or Not" cartoons filled with unusual incidents produced on the gridiron if he listended in on coaches fanning after the game is over.

Bill Alexander among a group of coaches. Eddie Laws, a guard on the Georgia Tech team, was taken out of the Vanderbilt game by his coach after a few plays to correct his defensive maneuvers on a certain play that was gaining over his territory. He had been on the bench only a few minutes when Dixie Roberts, of Vanderbilt, returning a punt, was chased out of bounds by a Tech tackler. Roberts, running at full speed, had to hurdle the Tech bench to keep from crashing. As he sailed over it and the players' heads, his foot caught Laws over the eye and knocked him unconscious. Laws was the only man injured in the game and he was on the bench.

That reminded someone of the time that the Georgia Tech coach in the last game of the season decided to send in a boy at quarterback who needed just one more game to make his letter. The coach waited until the game was nearly over. Then he called the boy to him, gave a few instructions and a pat on the back and sent him in. Just then a punt came sailing out of bounds. The boy reached up to catch it and dislocated a thumb. He had to go into the training quarters instead—but he was given his letter anyhow.

TRIPS OVER BUCKET

A game down South between two Negro teams had rocked along with neither side able to score. One big saddle-colored halfback was having a great time kidding a pal of his who played end on the other team. As the field judge raised his pistol, the big halfback started around end and was in the clear and gone for a touchdown when the pistol sounded. The halfback stopped, grinned and tossed the football to his pal, the end, with:

RECORD RUN RECALLED

Rip Major, the old Auburn star, tells a story about a game in which occurred one of the longest runs on record. Team A tried a flat pass when on team B's five-yard line. Team B's fullback intercepted it and lit out for a touchdown. A halfback of team A gave chase. On they went 20, 40, 60, 70 yards and the flying ball carrier was holding his own. Finally his pursuer began yelling:

"Hey, you, turn around, you're running the wrong way."

The pleading call had effect. The now bewildered intercepter, when 10 yards from a touchdown, made a grand circle and came rushing back at top speed. One of his own teammates tackled him not 10 yards from where he had started before he could cross the wrong goal. The run totaled close to 150 yards.

MIAMI-BILTMORE GOLF COURSE, CORAL GABLES, Fla., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—With only one bad hole out of his first nine today, John Revolta, 21-year-old professional of Menominee, Mich., carded a 36, one over par, to maintain his lead over early 45-hole finishers in the $10,000 72-hole Miami-Biltmore Open golf tournament with a score of 180.

Revolta took a 7 on the par 4 forty-first hole, but had a birdie 2 on the thirty-eighth and a birdie 3 on the thirty-ninth.

Tom Creavy, Albany, N. Y., made the morning turn with a par 35 and a 45-hole score of 187.

Vincent Eldred, of Pittsburgh, who had a score of 152 for 36 holes, was a late starter today.

Comes up Bunny Buntach with a new fighter (what another one?) in the person of Johnny (K. O.) Roberts, light-heavyweight, of Huntington, W. Va., who will make his Pittsburgh debut against Sunny Jim McVey, Rankin Negro, in the eight-round semi-final to the Johnny Peppe-Frankie Goosby 10-rounder at the Arena, on the North Side, Friday night.

Roberts is quite a puncher. He fought his way up from the welterweight division, meeting leading contenders all of the way, and also fought Joe Dundee when the latter was welterweight champion. Recently he has given away weight to meet the heavyweights.

YAROSZ FOE SOUGHT

Incidentally, Lew Raymond, the Arena matchmaker, has rounded out his card for Friday's show. He has Jackie Wilson, East End Negro bantamweight, against Juan Cruz, the Mexican, in the second bout, and Joey Speigal, of Uniontown, and Ray Winbush, Negro welterweight, of the Hill, in the opener.

Matchmaker Jules Beck, of the Garden, still is trying to land an opponent for Ted Yarosz next Monday night. If he does not succeed by nightfall, he will go after an all-star card.

Between Rounds

Abie Witz is recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident at Washington, Pa., last Friday, which had him confined in the Washington Hospital until Sunday. His head and one hand are bandaged.

Johnny Jadich, the junior-welterweight champion, has offers for matches with Steve Halaiko at Rochester, N. Y., December 14, and with Tony Stetz at Scranton, Christmas afternoon, while the Chicago Stadium wants him to meet Barney Ross on December 16.

The Greater Pittsburgh amateur boxing championships will be staged at McKeesport, December 11 and 15. The A. M. A. junior championships are carded at the Keystone A. C. in January. Two local boxers will appear in intercity bouts in Detroit on December 16.

Following is the crack all-star card of bouts arranged for the Cleveland News' Christmas Fund card, in the Public Hall, Cleveland, next Tuesday night: Billy Wallace vs. Sammy Fuller, Paul Pirrone vs. Ben Jeby, Eddie Simms vs. Adolf Heuser and Patsy Perroni vs. Tom Heeney, 10 rounds each; Phil Zwick vs. Pete Nebo, 8 rounds, and Eddie Bojack vs. Jackie Davis, 4 rounds.

Fuller holds a knockout victory over Wallace, and Jeby stopped Pirrone in the New York middleweight elimination tournament, which ended with Jeby being crowned champion. Davis has boxed Barney Ross, Chicago's new sensation, three times.

Title Playoffs In Baseball Loom

BUFFALO, Nov. 29.—(INS.)—Champions of the International Baseball League in 1933 may be determined by a post-season playoff of the leading teams.

Possibility of the league following the system of playoffs in the National Hockey League was discussed today following a meeting of club owners here, at which Frank Shaughnessy, of Montreal, offered the plan.

W. Va., Marshall Plan Post-Season Game

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The Morgantown Post says an agreement will be reached in 48 hours on a date for a post-season game between West Virginia University and Marshall College at Huntington.

The Post says negotiations for the game have been in progress several days. December 10 was first suggested, but Director R. M. Hawley, of Marshall, yesterday informed H. A. Stansbury, athletic director of the Mountaineers, that date is not satisfactory.

Stansbury suggested the game be played December 17, and is waiting a reply, the paper says.

STAGG IS HONORED

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The Rotary Club of Chicago today was host to a luncheon in honor of Amos Alonzo Stagg, who will be retired as director of athletics at the University of Chicago next June. The program included an address by Lt. Col. Henry Breckinridge, of New York, former assistant secretary of war, on "How An Outsider Sees Stagg."

37 GRIDDERS FATALLY HURT THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Despite added safeguards in the rules, death again took heavy toll off football players in the United States and territories during the season now drawing to a close, records showing 37 succumbed to injuries in games on sandlot, club, municipal, high school and college gridirons.

With most high school schedules completed, the total for the year probably will fall well below the record number of 50 fatally injured in 1931, but the present figure is the second greatest for any year since national records were kept. Up to 1931 the largest number was 20 in 1925.

Of the 37 dead, five were college players, 17 high school, and 15 sandlot, semi-pro and club team competitors.

Although five college players died of football injuries, only one was hurt during a regularly scheduled game—Ralph McClure, of Colorado College, whose neck was broken in a game against the University of Colorado. The other college players who died all were injured in inter-class games or in practice.

THREE PANTHER STARS HONORED

the halfback positions, the experts chose Warren Heller, mainstay of the Pittsburgh offense, and Pick Vidal, of Army, who ran wild all season until stopped short by Notre Dame Saturday. There was little opposition to the choice of Capt. Bart Viviano, of Cornell, for fullback. Colehower, a big, fast tackle, and Roy Engle, great defensive center, both Pennsylvania stalwarts, were far in front in the votes for the line posts. Milton Summerfelt, Army guard and captain, also overshadowed his opposition. Walter Uzdavinis, Fordham tackle, who was in every minute of all his team's games this season, was paired with Colehower at tackle. Bob Smith, Colgate, was picked to team with Summerfelt.

In addition to the first and second teams, an honorable mention list was compiled as follows:

While no official announcement was made, it was indicated that Columbus will have a playing manager in 1933.

It is understood that Southworth has been offered a position of coach and assistant manager of the New York Giants.

Packy McFarland Slated for Comish

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Packy McFarland, contender for the world lightweight championship 20 years ago, is slated to become a member of the Illinois State Athletic Commission when Gov.-elect Henry Horner assumes office, January 15.

Trojans to Get Rose Tourney Bid Tonight

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—With the Rose Tournament Football Committee meeting tonight to officially pick the University of Southern California as the West's representative in the annual Rose Bowl classic January 2, the question of the Trojan's opponent remained no nearer a solution.

Southern California athletic authorities preferred not to discuss a possible opponent from the East, Mid-West or South until they had received the official invitation.

Michigan still stands as the favorite to get the game, if the Big Ten barrier against post-season games can be removed. Failing of this, Colgate or Pittsburgh probably will get the call.

ARMY BADLY BATTERED FOR NAVY FRAY

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—With a badly battered squad and further handicapped by frozen practice fields, Army's football team yesterday started preparations for Saturday's game with the Navy.

Jablonsky was the only casualty from last Saturday's game who reported yesterday afternoon. Vidal Fields, Kilday, Kopcsak and Lincoln were all in their quarters nursing their bruises and sprains. Capt. W. F. Dewitt, team doctor, reported to Coach Sasse that Kilday and Fields might be available for a little light work today.

Although Maj. Sasse had only 45 minutes for practice yesterday afternoon, a little more than half of it was spent in the gymnasium where the Army gridiron mentor discussed the Notre Dame game.

Maj. Sasse also pointed out to the squad that the Navy team has steadily developed all season and that it had held Notre Dame to two touchdowns.

NAVY MAKES PLANS

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29.—(AP.)—If Franklin Field in Philadelphia is frozen Saturday, Army may expect at least one startling innovation in Navy's equipment.

Preparing for the climax of the football season, Coach Rip Miller has announced his boys will be outfitted in basketball shoes for their game with Army Saturday and that they would have one practice session thus shod.

Coach Miller said the idea was not new with him. Some years ago the late Knute Rockne gave his Ramblers basketball shoes for one of the games to be played on a frozen field and the results were even better than expected.

Navy yesterday had but a light practice, in which the defense against a pass attack was stressed. Coach Miller has averred he fears Army passes and has been drilling his men in the fine points of stopping this.

Today's drill is to be longer, but there is to be no more scrimmaging. No chances will be taken on injuries.

GAINS STOPS MORAT

BRADFORD, England, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Larry Gains, Toronto Negro, who holds the British Empire heavyweight championship, knocked out the Belgian, Moral, in the first round of a scheduled 15-round bout here last night. A hard right, 24 seconds after the fight started, ended matters.

Business

Favorable Comparisons With 1931 Begin To Appear

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

REPORTS OF CURRENT business which compare favorably with activity in the corresponding period of last year are beginning to appear. Since industry started on the skids in the late months of 1929, current figures have stood in an unfavorable light when put along side of those of preceding years.

But the recent spurt in business has materially narrowed the spread between the volume this year and the volume of last year. In some cases figures can actually be found which show improvement over 1931.

Any such change after three years of steady decline must be given a favorable interpretation. A period in which current business can make a favorable comparison with the previous year must mark a halt in business depression and probably indicates the beginning of recovery.

Coal Forges Ahead Of Previous Year

AMONG THE factors indicating the decline in business has halted, coal production is outstanding. In the week ended November 19, 7,700,000 tons of bituminous coal were mined according to the United States Bureau of Mines. This compared with 7,058,000 tons in the corresponding week of 1931. It represented a sharp improvement over the preceding week when 6,636,000 tons were produced.

The sudden spurt in this particular week is significant but allowance must be made for the fact that a last minute rush took place in order to get coal to lake ports before the close of the navigation season. Coal mining activity probably will show a sharp drop now that the lake season is ended and this type of business is removed, but production was close to the 1931 level during September and October.

The week ended November 19 marked the first period in which production exceeded last year since March, when output crossed the 1931 line for a single week. Previous to that time 1931 output was consistently below 1930 production with the exception of a similar period at about the same time of the year.

Railroads Report Improved Earnings

THE FACT THAT railroad car loadings have been coming closer to the levels of 1931 than in the earlier periods of this year has been mentioned in this column previously. While the railroads still are some distance behind their 1931 volume, several outstanding systems were able to show greater net railway operating income in October than in the same month of last year. This reflected exceptional progress in operating efficiency.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with gross operating revenues of $11,755,038 in October, 1932, against $14,615,180 in October, 1931, was able to report net railway operating income for the month of $3,409,351 against $3,361,732 a year ago.

Net railway operating income is the profit remaining after charging off all operating costs including maintenance expense and rent of equipment, but before paying bond interest and other fixed charges.

Several other important railroads are expected to publish monthly statements indicating progress similar to that of the Baltimore and Ohio.

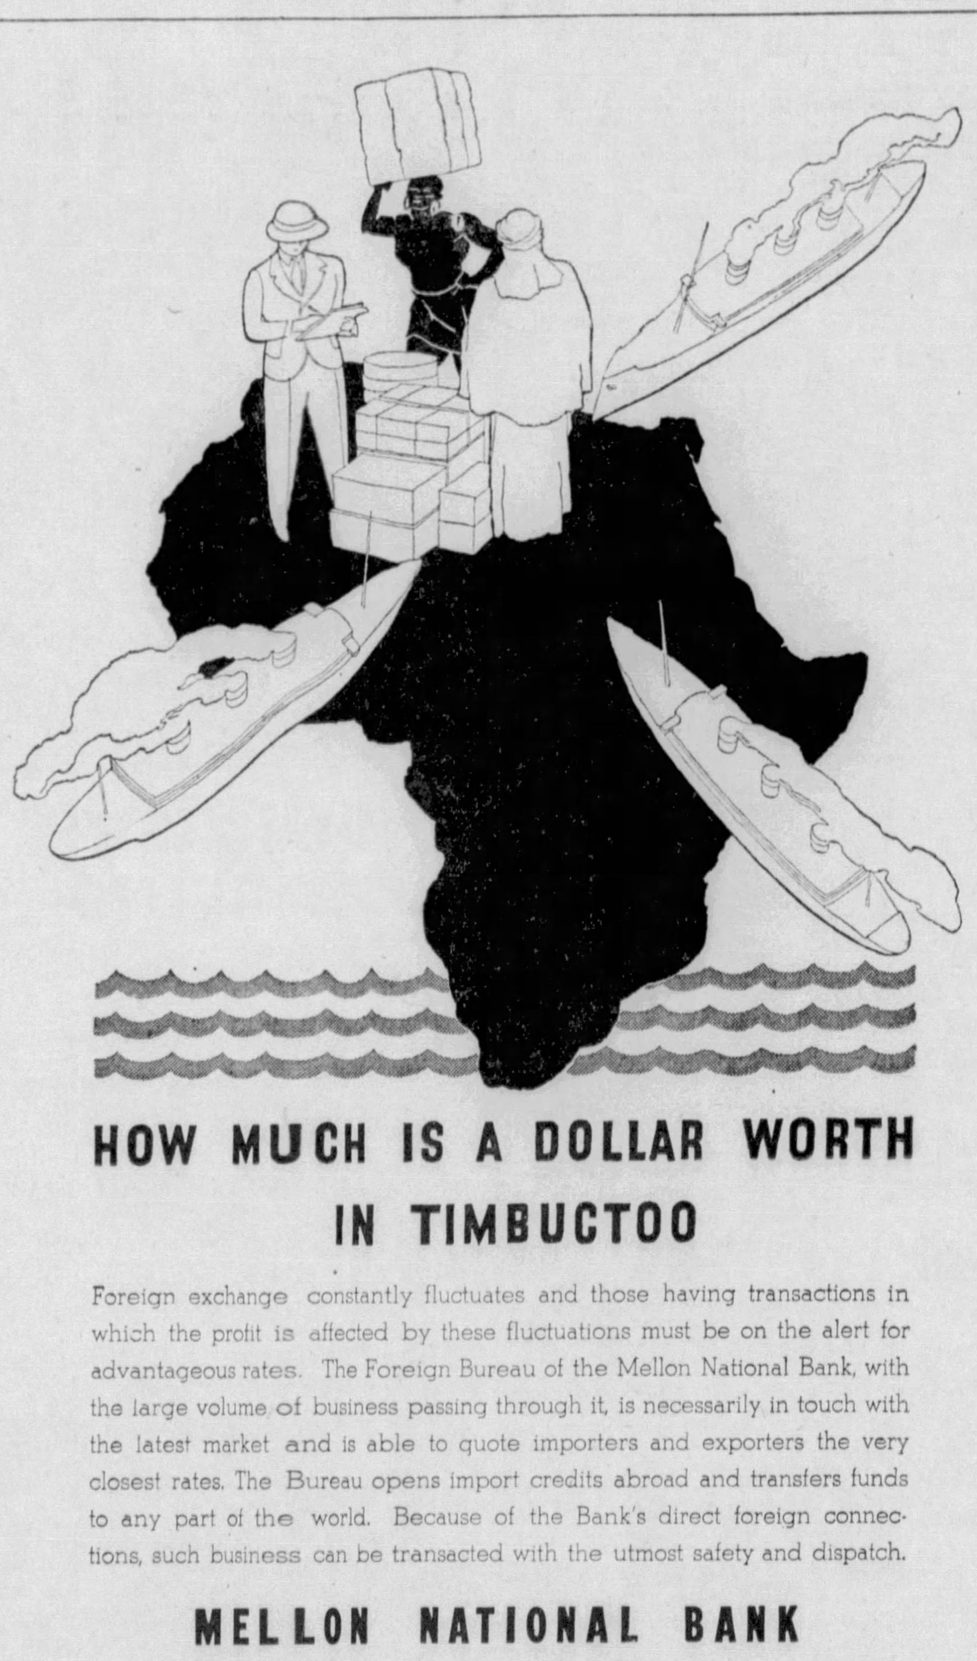
SECRECY VEILS COPPER MEET

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—The new international copper conference, attended by leading officials of the world's largest copper mines, got under way here today, surrounded with the utmost secrecy.

So carefully drawn was the veil of secrecy that high executives of some leading companies were not told the location of the meeting place.

Complex as the conference's problems admittedly are, there was fair hope in copper trade circles that an agreement might be reached on several points. The problems center around two main questions, production and marketing.

American producers are said to favor continuance of the present 20 per cent production quota. At the same time, they point to surplus stocks in this country, swollen by the rush of imports before the new 4-cent tariff went into effect last summer, as creating a desire among producers here to enter the European markets. South African and British Empire producers are said to oppose fresh American competition abroad.



HOW MUCH IS A DOLLAR WORTH IN TIMBUCTOO

Foreign exchange constantly fluctuates and those having transactions in which the profit is affected by these fluctuations must be on the alert for advantageous rates. The Foreign Bureau of the Mellon National Bank, with the large volume of business passing through it, is necessarily in touch with the latest market and is able to quote importers and exporters the very closest rates. The Bureau opens import credits abroad and transfers funds to any part of the world. Because of the Bank's direct foreign connections, such business can be transacted with the utmost safety and dispatch.

MELLON NATIONAL BANK

STOCKS SHOW MODERATE GAINS

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Prices tilted moderately upward in another dull, listless trading session on the stock exchange today.

The market pursued a zig zag course early in the day, but later firmed appreciably and entered the afternoon with most leading shares showing gains ranging from fractions to about a point. Rails were again in fair demand. After selling down about a point at the opening, Union Pacific and Santa Fe erased their losses and moved a point higher on the day. Southern Pacific, New York Central and Pennsylvania were slightly improved.

Market analysts stressed the relative steadiness of railroad stocks throughout the recent period of backing and filling. The improved undertone of this group was attributed not only to the manifest improvement in net earnings resulting from the autumn traffic gain, but also to hope that the non-partisan Coolidge Transportation Committee may recommend legislation of a helpful nature for action at the coming session of Congress.

There was considerable conjecture over the new international copper conference. It was freely predicted in the trade that much time would elapse before an agreement could be reached by the conflicting interests on the conference's two principal points: Curtailment of production and orderly marketing of surplus supplies. Nevertheless, hope was expressed in some quarters that concrete results might shape themselves after a series of secret meetings.

Trade reports contributed little by way of change to the picture of seasonally declining business. The recent weakening of crude oil prices in western oil fields was followed by reports that gasoline prices were easing somewhat in the Pacific Northwest, but elsewhere no important price changes were revealed.

WHEAT PRICES RULE STEADY

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Reflecting a new record-breaking smash of the British pound sterling, wheat today quickly went to within ⅛ cent of the all-time bottom record. Wheat prices, however, rallied at once. Opening irregularly ⅝c off to ¼c up, wheat later steadied at about the same as yesterday's finish. Corn started unchanged to ⅝c lower and afterward recovered somewhat.

On rebounds of prices from early setbacks, wheat in some cases scored gains of more than ½ cent a bushel. A tendency to narrow the December discount on wheat as compared with May was apparent at times. Corn and oats displayed less rallying power than did wheat. A good deal of stop loss selling of corn developed. December and May corn sold at a new low price record for the season.

On that date the index number stood at 60.2, a decline of two fractional points from the preceding week. A month ago the index stood at 60.3 and a year ago at 66.8.

Automobile Output Lower in October

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A total of 1,262,436 automobiles, trucks and taxicabs were produced in the United States and Canada during the first 10 months of 1932, compared with 2,278,272 during the first 10 months of 1931.

October output was 51,857, as against 86,463 in September and 81,582 in October, 1931.

HISTORIC DEBT NEGOTIATIONS RECALLED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—France's present efforts to secure a revision of her contractual debt obligations to the United States recalls earlier claims growing out of spoliations to American commerce during the Napoleonic wars.

President Monroe's administration tried in vain to collect. Then John Quincy Adams, in his first presidential message to Congress, in discussing the subject, said that the claims were "for property taken or destroyed under circumstances of the most aggravated and outrageous character." He further declared that "in the long period during which continual and earnest appeals have been made to the equity and magnanimity of France in behalf of these claims their justice has not been, as it could not be, denied." He further complained that repeated representations by our government had not even been answered by France.

Mr. Rukeyser

COMPLAINTS REPEATED

President Adams repeated such complaints in his subsequent messages, and in 1829 his successor, President Jackson, notified Congress that the pending claims "continue to furnish a subject of unpleasant discussion and possible collision between the two governments."

Finally on July 4, 1831, a treaty was arranged under which France was to pay the United States $5,000,000 in six yearly installments. Also France yielded certain claims in connection with the Louisiana Treaty of 1803 and the United States arranged to pay France for claims amounting to a quarter of a million dollars.

Ratifications were exchanged, and, according to Bennett Champ Clark, in his admirable new biography of John Quincy Adams, "the United States promptly put into effect its part of the agreement; but the government of King Louis Philippe treated the subject with that alofness which seems to be a national characteristic where questions of paying French debts are concerned."

FRANCE AMAZED

On the first due date, France made no payment. It was later disclosed that the King did not present the matter to the legislature until after the due date. After waiting for a brief time, President Jackson negotiated a bill of exchange on France for the sum due. This caused expressions of amazement in France, but did not facilitate payment.

After sending a special envoy to France and mush futile negotiation, President Jackson, in a scorching message to Congress in 1834, said:

"It is my conviction that the United States ought to insist on a prompt execution of the treaty, and in case it be refused, or longer delayed, take redress in our own hands. After the delay on the part of France of a quarter of a century in acknowledging these claims by treaty it is not to be tolerated that another quarter of a century is to be wasted in negotiating about the payment. The law of nations provides a remedy for such occasions. It is a well-established principle of the international code that where one nation owes another a liquidated debt, which it refuses or neglects to pay, the aggrieved party may seize on the property belonging to the other, its citizens or subjects, sufficient to pay the debt, without giving just cause for war. This remedy has often been repeatedly resorted to, and recently by France herself towards Portugal, under circumstances less unquestionable."

PAYMENT MADE

There was some considerable opposition to this stand in Congress, and France interpreted it as an insult, but finally in May, 1835, the French Chambers adopted an appropriation bill on the condition that the amount due would be paid only after Jackson apologized for his message. This Jackson refused to do. Then diplomatic negotiations between the two countries were broken off.

Finally, after much debate, the matter was turned over for mediation to Great Britain, with the explanation that no apology would be made. Great Britain announced that the French were willing to pay.

I cite this earlier debt chapter with no idea of suggesting a deadly parallel to the present situation. Nevertheless, I think the earlier history of debt relations between the two countries is interesting, in the light of current negotiations. Mr. Clark's book throws admirable light on the period covered.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Curb transactions today covered a limited range, both in issues traded and price fluctuations. The market was again able to ignore weakness of sterling, and after some early hesitancy quotations developed a moderate degree of firmness.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(AP.)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (000 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of stock list):

By FAITH BALDWIN

Elizabeth Worries About Daughter's Affection For Englishman

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Joyce, bounding involuntarily from corner to corner in the cab as the insouciant driver negotiated turns and applied brakes, had forgotten Basil. She thought of Van Alstyne, and the promise she had made him. It seemed so impossible that such a necessity would ever arise. She'd go on, as she was headed, she'd win Grandmother around, she'd achieve her point without bloodshed. Well, would she? It might mean a break, as Van Alstyne had warned her. She had not really faced that until the moment he had uttered the possibility.

But how could it ever come to that? She was too close, in the sense of affection, familiarity, to her grandmother. Yet—if he were right?

She held her head high. She thought, "I'll go through with it, even then."

What, thought Joyce, would become of her mother if Van Alstyne were proved right?

She had an instant's vision of Elizabeth, between her grandmother and herself, taking no part in the struggle, silent and ineffectual, yet in some manner slowly crushed to death, bleeding internally.

SEES BASIL

During the year which followed, Joyce saw Basil Staines several times. Their second meeting was at the debut of an acquaintance. It took place in the late spring, following the debutante's graduation from boarding school. They saw one another across the room and smiled in a sudden gladness of recognition, almost absurd, and certainly out of proportion. Later, there was an introduction, soberly received, and when their hostess had departed their hands went out.

"You here!"

"I hoped you'd be!"

Then they laughed, for no particular reason and found a quiet corner and something to eat and something to drink and a thousand topics of undistinguished conversation.

"You'll let me call on you?"

She answered, not at all piqued, and he knew it.

"Haven't you waited a long time?"

"Been busy," he explained, unabashed.

"Very well. But you can see for yourself how I've languished. You know, 'he cometh not,'" she said.

"Little liar," he murmured, affectionately. "When may I come?"

"You will have to meet grandmother first. She doesn't allow the boy friends on the doorstep unless she's looked them over first and satisfied herself as to (a) respectability, (b) family tree, (c) manners, (d) degree of danger."

LOUISA PRESENT

"As bad as that?" he asked, in terror. "Yes, believe me, I can meet her requirements on all points — except, perhaps, the last."

"You flatter yourself."

Her eyes, under the little beige helmet, mocked at him gently. He leaned a little nearer, took the empty cup from her hand, brushing her fingers, very lightly with his own.

"Are you so sure?"

She nodded, discreetly. Her heart repeated his question in astonishment and mistrust. There was something about him—a strength that drew her, a weakness that held her. She said to herself, disdainfully, purely biological, and succeeded in shocking a laugh from her own white throat.

"At me?"

"How your conversation is stenographic! Perhaps! Have you the proverbial penny?"

"Not a'pence," he uttered, doomily.

"Have you heard from Uncle Fred? I have, two little notes since he sailed. Look, there's Grandmother!"

She indicated Louisa, moving across the room toward them, tall, a little stooped now, the somber, captive eyes upon them. Basil looked up, said briefly, "My Aunt!"

"Not at all," Joyce contradicted, demurely, and rose.

BECOME ACQUAINTED

Yet before Louisa reached them, she had whispered, hurriedly, "Don't say anything about Uncle Fred, or meeting me with him."

Basil nodded, a smooth blond eyebrow elevated.

After a moment of trivialities he spoke, rather nicely.

"I've been wanting to call on you, Mrs. Sheldon, with your permission. My mother," he lied sweetly, "has spoken so often of you to me—of the friendship between her family and your own."

"Staines?" Louisa mused aloud. "You are Sally Morgan's son?"

"Yes." He almost added, Your Majesty!

Her face darkened, a very little. She had not forgotten "bow to the wittiest, kneel to the prettiest, kiss the one that you love best." High, childish voices and herself outside the circle. She remembered a Sunday in May and a graphophone grinding and herself at the doorsill.

"I will be happy to welcome you," she assured Basil with a stately courtesy. "Come, Joyce, it is time we went on to Mrs. Delafield's."

Joyce went, meekly, but not without a wicked, backward glance. Basil stood as she had left him. Witch, that grandmother! Did she resort to a broomstick when her cars were in the garage?

SEE EACH OTHER

He called; Louisa received him; it was one of her "days;" the formality was stupefying. Joyce was not there; she was in the classroom. He called again, and, being a dogged soul, he kept on calling. Finally Louisa grew accustomed to him.

Even so, it was difficult to see Joyce alone, in her own house. When he came, evenings, either Louisa or Joyce's mother sat in a far corner of the great room, under a reading lamp. He asked Joyce, in a despairing whisper, "When did they revive chaperons?"

"They never died—here. You find it annoying?"

He met her sober regard.

"Oh, dear me, no—charming—so unusual!"

She turned up the dented corner of her satiny mouth.

"Can't I ever see you without the ladies-in-waiting?" Basil asked, desperately.

"Possibly."

They met after that at odd times, strange hours in the mornings, the afternoons—at tea rooms, picture galleries, cinema houses, the Public Library. It was a good thing for Basil that his business was nominally, his own, did not confine him to stated hours.

Then it was summer and Joyce went to Connecticut and Basil dug up friends in the district and spent week-ends near her. Sometimes he called gravely and partook of tea and talked sedately to Louisa and Elizabeth while Joyce sat by, smiling indifferently. More often she picked him up at crossroads and drug stores and drove him to out of the way places in her car and talked—and talked—and laughed—and was silent.

BEGINS TO INTRUDE

Autumn came and the city and more work, new work, engrossing, tiring, compelling. They liked her so much, in the classrooms, the laboratories. They spoke of her among themselves, she had talent, and intelligence and a dedicated soul.

She was beginning to resent Basil Staines. He was getting in her way, standing in her light, clouding her vision. He was a dear, disturbing intruder, crashing bodily through her cold, exalted dreams.

He could not understand her dreams.

"Why must you go on with it?"

"I adore it!"

He looked at her, angrily.

"You don't. It's makeshift, I tell you." Suddenly he was a small boy again, "I don't know what you want with it all, messing around filth and smells and all that."

She laughed at him.

They were walking in Central Park. The lake was frozen, a glass lake, painted with blue shadows. The naked trees were dark and menacing, snow lay upon the sleeping earth.

"I love you!"

"Don't say it—don't—"

He was young but he had had experience with women, he was a sophisticated lover. He had retained that elusive boyishness, innocence, in which he himself believed. His approach toward women was: If only I'd met you first. He'd been in love often, once or twice he had loved. Each time it was as the first time, that was what made him dangerous. This time, as other times, it was the real, the compelling thing.

CONFESSES LOVE

He had the eyes of a little, eager boy, the body of a man as he faced her now, heard her urgent cry, warding him off, thrusting him aside.

"I have said it, I must say it!"

"You've spoiled everything. We were quite happy."

"Ah, you don't understand," he told her, "you're only a little girl—very small, very dear."

He choked, a little. It was genuine. He came to his emotions as a starving man to food, hungrily, appreciatively, desirously. Never wine and bread like this since the world began!

She was walking on, now, away from him. He caught her up in two steps, halted her. They were alone on the path, the world was a bubble about them, hushed, brilliant; if you spoke, if you moved suddenly, it might shatter.

"You love me, Joyce. Say it—say it!"

"I——"

Did she? Was this love, this physical disintegration — the knees that shook, the heart that was now fluid in her side, now flame? This ache to touch him, to hold him close, never to let him go?

Or if not, was there anything better? Was anything else a delusion, nonexistent?

She answered, very low, "I love you——"

Louisa Sheldon remained blind. But Elizabeth was not.

Joyce's abstractions, her pallors, her thinness, the beautiful modeling of her face noticeably released from the soft veiling of flesh. Joyce's moods, her darkened, questioning eyes. Elizabeth saw these things.

She walked her room at night, twisting her futile hands. What could she do or say? Could she go to her child and ask her—you love? And having forced the answer what could she say further? Warn? Probe? Pry?

That Basil was in love with Joyce, Elizabeth had known for some time. That Joyce cared for him had become perfectly obvious to her. Why then was there no talk of an engagement? What did it mean?

Was she a fool to be afraid? Things were conducted so differently now.

"You love me, Joyce. Say it—say it!" said Basil.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

By The Supreme Grand Jester

All records of the Memorial Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club for attendance were broken Saturday, when more than 700 youngsters turned out for the regular meeting.

This group of happy, carefree youngsters pledged allegiance to the flag of our country, sang the "Star Spangled Banner" gave a couple of cheers and then settled back to enjoy the entertainment which Manager Louis Gilbert had arranged for them. The list of entertainers follows:—

Richard Fetters.....sang, "My Silent Love."

Dorothy Govaller.....sang, "A Shanty In Old Shanty Town."

Josephine Crawford, tap dance, "Somebody Loves You"

Dorothy Ringer..sang "Three's a Crowd."

Stella Barton..sang "All of Me"

Bertha Kovac ..sang "Some of These Days"

Dennis Smith..song and dance "I Don't Know Why"

Mary Oliver..sang "Strangers"

George Welsh..Instrumentalist

And while we are talking about the instrumentalist, George Welsh, we want to say that, while he is only 8, he accompanied the members in all their songs and dances with his banjo and played several banjo solos, which made a big hit with the members.

Now let's hop aboard the magic Komic Club carpet and hop from McKeesport to Wilkinsburg. All set? Okay, here we go and we land right in front of the Rowland Theater, where we are greeted by Manager Dick Brown and his very popular cashier, Mildred Rotthoff, who is the mistress of ceremonies and conducts the meetings each Saturday.

Manager Brown and Miss Rotthoff usher us into the theater, where we see more than 600 members quietly waiting in their seats for the meeting to come to order. Miss Rotthoff goes to the stage, where the music racks and chairs for the Junior Komic Club Orchestra are in place, and as she appears a hush comes over the members and they all stand up and recite the club pledge. The members of the orchestra take their places, and the leader, John Gilbert, raises his baton and they play, first, "Somebody Loves You," "A Shanty in Old Shanty Town," and then one of the more recent popular numbers, "All-American Girl." With the playing of the last number the time allotted to the orchestra has been used. To thunderous applause the members of the orchestra take a couple of bows and leave the stage. While the stage is being cleared of the chairs and racks, Mildred tells the members about the Christmas party to be held on December 24.

Audrey Walter turned cartwheels and handsprings all over the stage and finished her part of the entertainment with an acrobatic dance. Then came the high spot of the entertainment. Hubert Gillette, who plays the violin in the orchestra. He also is a master of the mouth organ, playing any popular number that is requested. Saturday he played as his opening selection "Everyone Says I Love You." Then some little girl requested that old favorite "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and, Hubert always ready to oblige, played it very well. For his last number he played the tune which had made such a hit with the members when offered by the orchestra, "All-American Girl." This finished his part of the entertainment and the stage show was closed by Betty and Nancy Sweeney with a fast tap dance.

It's the Aunt Jennies Who Suffer

He knows that when the joyful day rolls around he will be overlooked like a bean in a barrel of apples.

Just too bad. But that's the way it goes. All around him is happy and secret activity. The string-savers and the paper misers are hoarding their wrapping materials and getting ready for bigger and better bundles.

The stores are putting in their holiday displays. The children are saving their pennies. But it will always wind up the same. Daddy will get the same old pair of bronze book-ends or a ticket to a travelogue he has heard before.

And pop does a lot better than Aunt Jennie. Poor old gal! Every year the family goes through the same old patter:

"Let's see. What will we give Aunt Jennie that she doesn't want? She's got a sofa pillow and she's innoculated against colds. How about an ostrich feather fan?

"Just a minute! What did Aunt Jennie give us last year? Why, that ungrateful old buggy whip didn't give us a thing. We'll get even with that old bonnet this time. We won't give her anything.

"That won't look right. What will the neighbors say? They'll say anything Aunt Jennie tells 'em. And she'd love it. She's got an inferiority complex anyway. She'd be delighted if we overlooked her. She ain't selling anything, but she's always looking for a talking point.

"We'll give her a Russian samovar. Aunt Jennie loves tea. And it tastes terrible out of a Russian samovar. We'll kill two birds with one birdseed."

So Aunt Jennie gets a Russian samovar. The tea tastes awful. But Aunt Jennie has to drink it. That's because the family comes over the next day to find out how Aunt Jennie likes the Russian samovar. She's got to make tea for them in the old magnificent pewter plated Moscow boiler. And she's got to make an extra pot of coffee for some of the folks because they don't drink tea.

And that's why stores can always sell Russian samovars in spite of the high protective tariff. It doesn't protect the Aunt Jennies a bit.

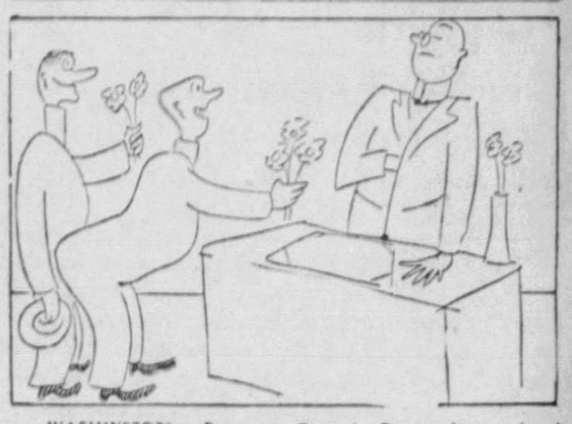
FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING



WASHINGTON.—Postmaster-General Brown has ordered postmasters to choose extra employes to handle the Christmas mail with a view to giving work to those out of jobs.

How very nice! How very nice! Postmaster-General Brown
Deserves to get a lot of cheers in anybody's town.
What he has said, what he has done, should leave us overjoyed.
"All extra employes," says he, "choose from the unemployed."
Such men as this, when they must choose, will always choose aright.
For, oh, his duty hard, but clear, he might have felt like shirking
And said, "Just give these jobs to guys who are already working."

No Help From Kline

Reliance Must Be Placed on Council to Cut the Budget and Reduce the Tax Rate.

Taxpayers who looked to Mayor Charles H. Kline for relief have looked in vain. The budget, as submitted to Council by the Mayor, calls for appropriations which, if granted, would require an increase of four mills in the tax rate on land and two mills on buildings. To anticipate a decreased rate of tax collections next year, and provide for the current deficit in excess of $2,000,000, an increase of seven mills on land would be needed.

The Mayor shows scant regard for the welfare of the people, scant appreciation of their necessities. Incomes have been seriously reduced, landlords have been forced to lower rents. The huge amount of tax delinquencies shows that property owners cannot even pay the present levy, much less the increase that Kline calls for. Conditions call for a tax reduction.

At a meeting of city firemen a few days ago threats were openly made to retaliate at the polls against Mayor Kline and the councilmen if they reduced the firemen's pay. The Mayor may not have been influenced by the threats, but the fact remains that he has ignored the widespread demand from the citizens in general that salaries be reduced.

The taxpayers' hope of relief now rests with the Council. There is some encouragement to believe that several of the councilmen who have hitherto supported the Mayor will not go along with him this time but will insist on drastic reductions in municipal expenses, including a cut in salaries.

Some sort of public demonstration by the citizens might be helpful in influencing these councilmen. They come up for re-election next year, and, with the payroll threatening to knife them if they cut the pay, it would be well to let them know that they will offend a much larger number of voters if they fail to effect the economies necessary to permit a tax reduction.

Wages have been cut in nearly all trades and industries, and we see no reason why city employes should be exempt. However, if the budget can be cut, not by reducing salaries but by letting employes go whose services can be dispensed with, the latter plan may be preferable. We have no doubt there are drones who could be removed from the payroll without crippling the public service.

Taxes must be reduced.

A Risk Worth Running

The Pittsburgh Railways Company's Argument Against Reasonable Bus Fares Fails to Impress.

In appealing for an injunction to prevent the operation of busses by the Community Service Association, the Pittsburgh Railways Company presents again its stock argument against a reasonable bus fare—that if the people should be furnished with bus service at a low rate the railways company would lose so much business that it might be compelled to suspend operations.

The argument has always impressed the Public Service Commission. It has consistently taken the position that the street railways system, as our most important agency of mass transportation, must be protected, and to that intent has given the railways company, through its subsidiary, the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, a monopoly of bus service within the city and allowed it to charge what is to many persons the prohibitive fare of 25 cents.

But there is abundant evidence that the public is not impressed with the argument and is perfectly willing to run the risk of losing street car service if furnished bus service at a reasonable rate.

Enforcing the Blue Law

No Better Way Could Be Found to Strengthen Public Sentiment in Favor of Repeal.

The Sabbath Association of Western Pennsylvania has undertaken to enforce the Blue Law. On its complaint county detectives closed a movie show in Sharpsburg Sunday at which a collection was to have been taken for a philanthropic purpose.

The advocates of the repeal of the Blue Law could ask nothing better. Strict enforcement of the statute will strengthen public sentiment for its elimination.

Let the Sabbath Association prosecute all violations of the Blue Law that may occur from now until the Legislature meets, and there will not be a corporal's guard to vote for its retention.

It's More Humane, Too

The State Spends Some Money, at Gov. Pinchot's Bidding, to Prevent Costly Accidents.

There are, or were until recently, 112 motor trucks in the State Highway Department which were not equipped with self-starting devices, but had to be cranked by hand.

In less than six months of this year 45 men were injured when the hand starters "kicked back." The injuries consisted mostly of broken jaws, wrists, hands and arms. The accidents caused the loss of 865 working days and cost on the average, according to the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, which has made a study of the subject, $86.57 each, paid out of the workmen's insurance fund.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot's attention was called to the matter, and he ordered self-starters installed on the trucks, at an estimated cost of $6,943.

The taxpayers will not begrudge the expenditure. It is good business, and the humane thing to do as well.

Private truck owners may profit by the state's experience.

'The Last Mile' -:- -:- -:- By Nelson Harding

The shadows lengthen everywhere
As water cart and camel wend
The way that leads to journey's end.

The wabbling wheels, the stumbling feet,
The driver slumped down in his seat,
Present sad pictures to the eye,
But yet they do not make us cry!

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Worrying as a Business

When a woman marries a man, she elects herself the little shock-absorber between him and all the petty cares and anxieties of life—and appoints herself his memory, time-clock, conscience and digestion.

Perhaps he's right. But there's a reason. A woman has GOT to do a man's worrying for him, or he'll find out why!

* * *

Whether it's worrying about where he is nights or when he shall get up mornings.

About how he overworks or why he doesn't work harder.

About how to make him stay in the house or how to get him into heaven—it's all up to the woman!

* * *

Before marriage he calls it "mothering" him, after marriage he calls it "nagging" him. But he loves it! And if she stopped it he'd call it "neglecting" him.

* * *

Nothing gives a man such a luxurious feeling as to turn over and placidly doze for five or 10 minutes more, in the sweet consciousness that his wife is "worrying" because he won't get up.

care of himself. He can find his own belongings, remember to have his hair cut, always be on time at the office, keep his evening clothes pressed, write the weekly letter to his mother, and keep out of jail.

But from the moment he promises to "cherish" a woman, he apparently loses all his faculties; his memory, his sense of responsibility, and the physical strength to lift things after he has dropped them on the floor.

The truth is, that a man just loves to be "worried about"—and a woman just loves to worry about him.

* * *

Worrying about a man appears to be woman's Big Business in life!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The Fifth avenue 5 o'clock promenade, reminiscent of the hearty days when Mrs. Belmont trumpeted in coach and four from the Plaza to the Waldorf, has been revived. Save it has moved a block eastward to Park avenue. The renaissance of sauntering is attributable to drooping dividends.

The parade starts near the gold tower arching Park at Forty-sixth and usually ends at wide Fifty-seventh. Now and then, there is a speckle of Broadway when a group of chorus chicks cluck along. And wasn't it Charles Hanson Towne, wide-eyed in admiraton, who murmured: "If they just wouldn't speak!"

Here and there, too, is a gray old wolf of the club windows who has crept from his leather-cushioned lair to behold a bewildering world he no longer knows. Near the Ambassador, a thin sprig in striped trousers, ruled like a ledger, and lapeled with a gardenia, idles on the curb. Blumenthal—the ex-Mayor's pal.

A movie star, pertly self-assured, skips out of the flower shop of Irene Hayes, flips a cigaret gutterward, pauses and arches already red lips for another swipe. A whiskered son of Israel, smooching Ghettoward, mumbles: "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways!"

That fine editorialist, Idwal Jones, is one frequenter of Paris who never visited Harry's in rue Daunou, the Ritz "sweat room" or other rendezvous of Manhattan Parisians. He did go to Ciro's once, and, oddly enough, with a Jesuit priest from the Sorbonne, a historian of the Byzantine who loves bright lights, the hum of boulevards and cointreaux. While a band blared "Yes, sir, that's my bay-bee," they argued the Port Royal controversy and Pascal's accuracy in his letters.

* * *

Mr. Jones is one of the wise Americans dining in those excellent dingy cafes, with corkscrew stairs to wine cellars, along the Boulevard Antoine. And, tiring of such cuisine, hies to Nantes and, perhaps, boards a swaying stage to the coast of the Bay of Biscay. His is the France, far from the Place de la Concorde's incessant honk, most Francophiles contemplate after 50—declining days on the Vendeean shore with melons in the garden, a jar of shag, fresh sea winds in one's whiskers and, now and then, a joust at chess with M. le Cure.

Nothing has a livelier perk for the mind than a smooth shave and expert massage. The most avidly alert man I know goes to a barber shop every morning at 7:30 for these twin ministrations. I tried it once at the same hour and flared into the sunshine in a well tonsored glow. But the unbreakable habit of late sleeping precluded continuance so I began to try out the idea at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. But it didn't work. Early morning is the time. And why not a Seven-Thirty Shaving and Marching Club?

Hilarious tales come from Hollywood movie lots, about the clashing temperaments of the royal family—Lionel, Ethel and Jack—grouped for the Rasputin film recently. There was an assistant director who attempted to mollify Miss Barrymore in a tempestuous moment and was rewarded with a barrage of blistering epithets. Exhausting her ribald repertoire, she wound up limply with: "You badly dressed young man you!"

They were talking of a lawn party for 1,000 guests in one of Long Island's exclusive and carefully razored suburbs. Irvin Cobb was asked how he'd like to be the guest of honor. "I don't believe that many people would come to see me lynched," he gloomed.

Also there's Cobb's grand simile: "He has as much sense of direction as an egg-beater."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

So now we're going to get that "new deal"?

Well, maybe. And again, maybe not. But one thing's sure—and you can write it down in your little book—

DESPITE ALL CAMPAIGN PROPHESIES, IT WON'T BE UP TO MR. ROOSEVELT TO GIVE US THAT NEW DEAL. IT WILL BE UP TO US: TO YOU AND ME, AS INDIVIDUALS.

For no power on earth—no revised form of government or redistribution of wealth—can possibly give us a new deal in life unless and until we, ourselves, are ready for it.

AND OUT OF THE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY ONE MILLION PEOPLE IN THESE UNITED STATES, I'LL WAGER THAT NOT MORE THAN A FEW THOUSANDS COULD REALLY USE A NEW DEAL IF YOU HANDED IT TO THEM.

For, now that all the campaign excitement is out of the way, the truth can be told, and it's up to us to face that truth.

WE'VE HAD MISERY, A LOT, DURING THESE LAST THREE YEARS, BUT PLENTY OF THE MISERY WAS OUR OWN FAULT.

Times were when we saw things and lived things pretty straight, we Americans. But gradually—what with machines taking the roughage out of the day's jobs; slick ads filling us with a lot of de luxe notions, and easy money making it possible for us to gratify those notions—why, we went plain soft and silly.

We stopped depending on ourselves. We began depending entirely on machines. We stopped doing our own sewing, our own cooking, our own building, our own planting, our own walking—even our own thinking. Our food came out of tin cans. Our thoughts came off print paper. Our laughs came from a silver screen.

Our jobs? Nine times out of ten, we didn't care for them, had no pride in them—for there was no meaning in them. They weren't, in any real and salty sense, our jobs at all. They were just insignificant segments of some Big Fellow's Industrial Program and, though doing them filled our pockets, it didn't promote our personal pride, or power, or peace, one particle.

So always, what with having all the natural, significant jobs done for us and doing insignificant jobs ourselves, we were constantly restless and dissatisfied. And we bought Things to try and quiet that discontent. Things—Things THINGS!

Why, I remember once, about four years ago, being so gummed up with idiot ideas that I went out and bought myself a black lace step-in. Now hanging a black lace step-in on me is just about as equivalent and even more absurd than putting earrings on a man-o'-war. But did I see the joke? No, stranger, I didn't! I'd gotten so that I really thought that black lace step-ins were a perfectly logical thing to have.

Just the other day, rummaging through my bureau, I turned the fool thing up. And was my face red! It was, partner. And I'm thanking the good, old-fashioned God, who forgives fools and gives them another chance, that it was!

So now I'm writing this article in a patched flannel shirt, clay daubed cords and battered mining boots, and thanking heaven that in half an hour I'm due to go out and get on the business end of a hoe and work up a little honest sweat.

Am I going to get a New Deal? You're darned right I am, brother! And Roosevelt won't have to hand it to me, either. I'm going out to dig it for myself.

And I note that America is doing likewise—and grateful for the chance. It won't be easy for a while. It will, to be brutally frank, be the devil of a battle. Some of us won't make the grade, and the rest of us will have to help.

But we're on our way again. We've won our way back to the common sense and the hard work and the plain living that made us Real Guys once, before we all went ga-ga.

No Debt Commission! Hitler-Clemenceau

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Mark Sullivan, the dependable interpreter of Mr. Hoover, finds that Mr. Roosevelt will not "co-operate" with Mr. Hoover in the matter of the debts. Then he explains just what he means. It seems that Mr. Hoover has certain plans; that these plans are not in complete harmony with the plans of the man the people have preferred in the election, and since Mr. Roosevelt will not abandon his plans and take those of Mr. Hoover, there is a refusal on Roosevelt's part to "co-operate." Of course! Co-operation, in the meaning of the administration, ever has been an unconditional surrender to Mr. Hoover's ideas.

This is a vindication of our contention in these columns for a year and a half that the present administration does not know the meaning of co-operation; that when its political opposition does co-operate, as it has on so many things connected with the battle against depression, the administra claims all the credit. Now that Mr. Roosevelt has an overwhelming mandate from the people, it is to be expected that he will act upon his own ideas and certainly not surrender his own policies and programs.

A Precious Admission

The debtor nations and their thoroughly organized American allies, seeking to transfer the debts to the American taxpayers, as Mr. Hoover finally has said, evidently propose to continue the controversy. We are to have more notes. And the answer will be that most of these nations have a greater capacity to pay their debts than we have to pay the debts of all of them combined, and the answer is that all these nations can pay their debts by slightly reducing the enormous sums they have the capacity to spend in war preparations.

The word from Paris is that the decision here not to shoulder the debts of the world is not so dismaying because it may mean "the comparatively small additional taxation that must be imposed." This is a precious admission. And this "comparatively small additional taxation" would be added to a rate of taxation now that is also remarkably low compared with the almost terrifying rate in America, made necessary to balance our budget.

And even this "comparatively small additional taxation" could be escaped by reducing to the extent of the amount needed for debt payments, the appalling amount, or per cent, set aside in the French budget for purposes of war.

These nations do not want to reduce on war for the sake of peace and civilization; they prefer to reduce on debts at our expense so they may continue to maintain as they are today, heavier and more sinister armaments than existed before the World War. Thus we are to submit to the transfer of the debts of all the nations to our taxpayers that Europe may prepare for all of us another war that will blot out the civilization that we know.

Mr. Hoover Will Not Act in the Dark

Just what is to be done about the payments due on December 15 is a matter for Mr. Hoover, not Mr. Roosevelt. The latter certainly would be too gracious to want to embarrass the man who now has the responsibility in any policy he may wish to pursue. This is now called an indisposition to "co-operate."

Meanwhile having conferred with leaders in Congress of both parties and found unanimity of sentiment, Mr. Hoover will not act in the dark. If he wishes to create a new Debt Commission his is the privilege to recommend and Congress will have the duty to pass upon the recommendation. That is "the American way."

The very creation of a Debt Commission is an invitation to all the debtor nations to hurry in with their pleas for the transfer of part or all the debts. The refusal to create such a commission does not deprive a single nation of the privilege of making its pleas and representations to the American government through the usual diplomatic channels.

We are asked to make a public proclamation of a necessity for the transfer or reduction; for that precisely is what the creation of this commission would mean.

Would Consult Congress

It is said that diplomatic negotiations on the debts would leave Congress out; that Congress alone has the power to transfer the debts to us, or to transfer only a part of the burdens of other nations to us; and that Congress might resent being left out of the negotiations and defeat any settlement agreed upon in resentment.

It is to be assumed that the leaders of Congress would be consulted by the executive before any agreement would be reached in diplomatic negotiations. It literally is not true, as stated, that this is impossible or never has been done. One illustration: years ago when Texas was clamoring for admission to the republic, it was found by President Tyler that a treaty could be had with Texas looking to that end. He had Congress canvassed to determine its temper on the subject and found enough opposition to justify him in proceeding to no agreement in diplomatic negotiations. That postponed the admission of Texas for some years.

'Shoo, Fly, Don't Bother Me'

Quite as interesting as anything that has recently occurred here is the action of Hindenburg in Germany in putting Hitler in his place. Offered the chancellorship on condition of the latter's co-operation with other elements in government, the head of the German Fascists arrogantly demanded dictatorial power.

Modestly he proposed that Hindenburg should violate his oath to the republic and submerge himself that Hitler might emerge as the dictator of the state. The arrogance of the demand is set forth in Hindenburg's interpretation of it, as demand that he "give his presidential authority to the leader of a party that has ever and again emphasized its exclusiveness and that has generally taken an attitude of opposition to him personally."

Dismissing the Hitler ultimatum with a "shoo fly, don't bother me," the old warrior, who is the bulwark of Germany, expresses a willingness to see and confer with the Fascist leader at any time in the hope that the latter ultimately may agree to that co-operation essential to the tranquility of the state and the happiness of the people.

Clemenceau's Statue

In Paris on Thursday the statue of Clemenceau was unveiled with impressive ceremonies in the absence of members of The Tiger's family. They resent the statue itself and the inadequacy of the national tribute in it.

Last summer, riding in the Champs Elysees, I had a real thrill on coming unexpectedly upon this statue. Set back among the trees was the figure of a short, sturdily built man, with a grim expression on the face, and in garments suitable for the trenches. It was an animated, life-like piece of work.

Just why the ladies of the family resent the rough costume of the trenches, and prefer more formal dress is not easy to imagine. In no other garb could the fighting Clemenceau have been so vividly associated with the glorious phase of his career. The statue is not so imposing as that of Gambetta in front of the Louvre; it is much on the order of that of Danton. Its very simplicity is its strength and beauty. Perhaps in time some more imposing memorial will be raised; but Clemenceau's monument is his country; his epitaph is the history of the war; his tribute is the triumph.

Isn't It So?
